Associated Editorial

By Michael Dean

Remember the way Marvel's letterers used to be the butt of some joke at the end of the credits boxes in Silver Age titles? Well, I'm rapidly beginning to feel like the Artie Simek of the CBG bullpen. I'm referring to the editorial in CBG #1227, in which Maggie reported an altercation between Associate Editor John Jackson Miller and myself over my sloppy care of an early Marvel Tales. (I had folded it over to a single page instead of laying it flat.)

Maggie and John, being the unshy and unretiring individuals they are, regard any communications quieter than a bellow as beneath their notice. Hence, in Maggie's account, John "points out" things, while Michael "mutters," "murmurs," and "weakly responds."

Maggie (fair-minded, once you get her attention) has been kind enough to allow me a few additional whimperings to set the record straight. I did not, as implied, take a stand against taking care of comic books. John certainly makes the strongest argument there is for bagging and boarding comics when he "points out" the need to preserve rare titles for future generations, and I have gone so far as to at least bag the rarer titles in my collection. For the sake of argument, however, let's set aside (carefully) the most precious Golden Age rarities and stick to well-read Silver Age survivors like my Marvel Tales.

Comic-book care runs the gamut from rolling them up and stuffing them in a back pocket to storing them bagged, boarded, and unopened in a climate-controlled vault. Somewhere along that continuum, in my view, a line is crossed between preserving and fetishizing. For me to bag and board every comic book in my collection would involve such a cost in time and money that it would severely cut into my ability to acquire and read more comics. That's where I draw the line. And, if that means my "spine-rolled" Marvel Tales are going to poke their backsides up a little higher than other people's copies, so be it.

Of course, different people draw their lines in different places. CBG would like to hear from readers about their own philosophies, horror stories, and strategies regarding comic-book storage for an upcoming feature on this subject.

And the winners are ...

In the "Mystery" issue (CBG #1222), CBG ran the "Sin City Six Contest" in conjunction with Dark Horse Comics. Six entries were chosen at random to receive the following prizes:

The grand prize (A Sin City trade paperback, a Sin City: A Dame to Kill For trade paperback, the three Sin City one-shots (Lost, Lonely, and Lethal; Silent Night; and The Babe Wore Red and Other Stories), and the special limited edition hardcover of Sin City: Big Fat Kill) goes to: Robert Rowe of North Hollywood, Calif.

First prize (the first five items and the regular hardcover edition of Sin City: Big Fat Kill) goes to: Daniel Flavin Bonner of Sedona, Ariz.

The four winners receiving the three Sin City one-shots are: Jerry Crowe of Olmsted Falls, Ohio; Michael Cascio of Mansfield, Ill.; Rodney J. Brown of Colorado Springs, Colo.; and Gene F. Rewers of Topeka, Kan.

Congratulations to all the winners — and thanks to Dark Horse Comics for providing the prizes.

Court rules bondholders can replace Marvel Board of Directors

By Michael Dean

A decision in the U.S. District Court in Delaware May 14 granted Marvel bondholders the right to vote their shares, giving them the ability to replace Marvel Entertainment's current board of directors. The ruling will not take effect until May 24 in order to give Marvel and its lenders a chance to respond to the decision.

David M. Friedman, an attorney representing the Bondholders' Committee, said, "This is a tremendous victory for the bondholders, the public equity holders, and all other parties interested in seeing Marvel emerge from Chapter 11 and return to profitability. As soon as the bondholders oust the lame-duck Marvel Board, former Marvel executive Joseph Calamari will head up a transition team committed to turning Marvel's business around. We will now set our sights on obtaining court approval of our disclosure statement so we can distribute our plan to creditors and stockholders and continue to move toward confirmation."

An earlier ruling by U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Helen S. Balick had restrained the bondholders from voting as shareholders, arguing that a case must first be made to lift an automatic stay that protects a company during Chapter 11 reorganization. The new decision by federal Judge Roderick McKelvie reversed Balick's earlier ruling.

A Marvel spokesperson told CBG, "We have not seen the ruling so we don't know the basis for the judge's decision. The fact that he has given us 10 days provides opportunity for Marvel to seek legal remedies to prevent the bondholders from seizing control of the company."

The Bondholders' Committee had announced March 21 its intention to use its majority vote to replace Marvel's existing board of directors with a board consisting of seven members selected by the Bondholder Committee and two members to be selected by Marvel's Equity Committee. The Bondholder Committee's announced selections included: lead bondholder Carl Icahn; Voyager Communications co-founder J. Winston Fowlkes III; Biotechnology General Corp. and LIVE Entertainment Inc. Director Charles K. MacDonald; Icahn Associates Vice President Juoko T. Tamminen; Harold First, a specialist in entertainment accounting; ACF Industries Inc. Treasurer Robert Mitchel; and Westgate International, L.P., Portfolio Manager Vincent J. Intrieri.

A disclosure statement hearing has been scheduled for June 16, at which time Judge Balick will consider the Bondholder Committee's reorganization plan for Marvel. The plan calls for raising $365 million through a rights offering to bondholders and non-insider Marvel stockholders. Marvel's total debt is in excess of $700 million.

Under an alternative plan proposed by Marvel and reportedly favored by the lending banks, Toy Biz Inc. would merge with Marvel, and Marvel's secured lenders would receive the cash proceeds of a $250 million loan and a five-year note covering another $170 million. In lieu of the remaining $290 million of Marvel's debt, Marvel's lenders would receive a 28% equity in the newly merged Toy Biz/Marvel and all of the stock of Marvel subsidiaries Fleer/SkyBox and Pannini. Marvel also proposed to retain The Blackstone Group as investment banker to conduct an auction process seeking higher bids for Marvel and Toy Biz either together or separately.

Marvel reports first-quarter loss

Marvel reported a first-quarter net loss of $27.8 million or 27¢ per share May 15. During the same period one year ago, Marvel reported a net loss of $4.4 million or 4¢ per share. For the quarter ending March 31, 1997, Marvel reported net revenues of $156.7 million compared to net revenues of $189.6 million one year ago.

Marvel attributed the loss of revenues to concerns among retailers and licensees over Marvel's Chapter 11 proceedings.

Lobdell, Davis, Farmer: new 'Fantastic Four' creative team

By Matt Brady

Completing the "Heroes Return" picture, Scott Lobdell, Alan Davis, and Mark Farmer have been announced as the creative team when The Fantastic Four returns to the mainline Marvel universe this fall. Lobdell said his plans for the series date back before Heroes Reborn. "I'd approached Adam Kubert with the idea of doing the FF about 20 months ago," he said. "By the time we decided it was something we definitely wanted to do, the 'Heroes Reborn' announcement came down from on high. That put everything off, and we hadn't really thought about it again until recently, when it was announced that 'Heroes Reborn' would be ending."

Recently, it was announced through the Internet that both Lobdell and Kubert would be tackling The Fantastic Four; however, Kubert decided to stay on as artist for The Incredible Hulk. Marvel editorial went into high gear to find a replacement and approached Farmer and Davis.

Lobdell spoke of his desire to "de-X-Menify" the FF and refocus the group on the "Fantastic" portion of the title. "The Fantastic Four is about a family of adventurers," he said. "Lately, there's been too much emphasis on the family and not as much on the adventurers. By doing that, the series strayed away from what made Fantastic Four unique.

"When we think about Stan Lee and Jack Kirby's FF run, you knew what the characters were about from the first issue, so the fun of it was taking them and slamming them into a new adventure every month. One month it was Doctor Doom, then it was Black Panther, then it was The Negative Zone, and then The Silver Surfer falling to Earth.

"Every time you opened up an issue, you didn't have any idea what was going to happen. That's what we want to get back to: the feeling that, when you open the comic book, you'll be pulled into a strange and different place."

To these ends, Lobdell added that he already has storylines planned including a new take on the relationship between Reed Richards and The Wizard, as well as a return of The Frightful Four.

As for dealing with the potentially tricky continuity of "Heroes Reborn," Lobdell expressed the same sentiment as other "Heroes Return" creators, saying that, while a nod will be made to the adventures in the "Heroes Reborn" universe, for the most part, the team will be looking toward the future.

"The FF has always been about one adventure after the other after the other," Lobdell said. "As far as we are concerned, 'Heroes Reborn' was one really big adventure, and now we're off to the next adventure, and we'll be facing front, not looking back."

Heroes Return Scorecard

For those keeping track at home, here's the word on who'll be doing what this fall when the heroes return to the Marvel universe. By the way, all creators involved have signed or are soon to sign letters of intent for their projects.

Heroes Return — four-issue, weekly mini-series returning the characters to the Marvel universe. Written by Peter David, pencilled by Sal LaRocca, and inked by Art Thibert.

The Avengers — written by Kurt Busiek, pencilled by George Pérez.

Captain America — written by Mark Waid, pencilled by Ron Garney.

Iron Man — written by Kurt Busiek, pencilled by Sean Chen.

MASS O' MEDIA

By Matt Brady

★ Just when Superman Reborn's preproduction problems are beginning to hit the major news services, it looks as though Warner Brothers aims to turn Superman into a movie franchise along the same road as the Batman franchise. To these ends, Variety reported that Warners is in meetings with Jim Carrey about Carrey starring as Brainiac, opposite Nicolas Cage as Superman. Carrey is asking for his usual $20 million for his work on the film, a whopping eight weeks. Also, Tim Burton is reportedly unsure about Cage portraying the Man of Steel and has been reported to be looking into getting Ralph Fiennes to don the big "S."

By the way, if Carrey worked for a full year at that rate, he'd earn $130 million, enough to buy 66,666,667 copies of the current issue of The Adventures of Superman.

★ Power and politics, Hollywood style: The L.A. Times recently reported that Harrison Ford personally called the heads of both Paramount and Warner Brothers requesting that they don't release their own big movies on July 25th, the day Ford's Air Force One hits theaters. While Ford didn't make any threats, he did remind Paramount's Jonathan Dolgen that he has made truckloads of money for the studio over the years (remember Indiana Jones and the Tom Clancy movies?), and reportedly asked, "Jonathan, what the hell are you guys doing?" as Paramount is reportedly considering the 25th as the release date for James Cameron's $200 million Titanic. Expect to see both Paramount and Warner Brothers to keep the schedule clear on the 25th.

★ Somebody who's definitely keeping his eye on when movie release schedules are finalized is Todd McFarlane. Somewhat late in the game, Variety reported that New Line Cinema has shifted the release of Spawn up to Aug. 8, from its original Aug. 22 release date. Expect everyone to be sweating it out until the final dates are set, but Aug. 8 is one of the dates that Paramount is considering for Titanic's release, something that would leave a lesser-known film such as Spawn fighting for a foothold. McFarlane said that, one way or the other, he's not worried. "If there was any real concern about it, New Line, who's been at the movie game longer than I ever will be, would know about it," McFarlane said. "Our only concern was that, by bumping us up two weeks, we lost two weeks of special-effects work in post-production. We worked out a compromise with New Line where we'll now send the prints to more special-effects houses to get the work done, and, on top of that, New Line just gave us a little more money to get the movie in on time.

"In the end, even if we do go up against Titanic, I've always been ready to go toe-to-toe with the big boys."

★ Variety has reported that Disney has recently finalized the cast and crew for its big-budget remake of the 1949 classic Mighty Joe Young. The film will star Bill Paxton, Chartize Theron, David Paymer, and Regina King. The new version will stay true to the original; this time the 15-foot Joe will be brought from the African jungle to modern-day L.A., where he goes on a ram-

Disney's version is directed by Ron (Tremors) Underwood, while visual effects will be handled by Rick (The Nutty Professor) Baker taking care of the ape suit and makeup, and Hoyt (The Abyss) Yeatman handling the computer-generated images. Word is that MJY's effects will make the gorilla in Congo look like — well, a girl in a gorilla suit. Look for Joe to hit theaters next summer.

★ In other Disney movie news, it seems that, thanks to last winter's live-action hit 101 Dalmatians, Walt's kingdom has revitalized its entire live-action movie division. Variety reported that Disney Pictures has several science-fiction projects in the works.

Leading the pack is a big-budget adaptation of Buck Rogers, the rights for which Disney acquired for a reported high six figures. Tony (Eraser) Puryear has been brought on board to write the screenplay.

Other Disney science-fiction projects include Bicentennial Man, based on the novel by Isaac Asimov; Hardwired, described as "10 Little Indians on a spaceship"; Jettisoned, about an abandoned Reagan-era "star wars" satellite that becomes active; and Mission to Mars, about man's first trip to the fourth planet.

★ Mad Max = Montag? The movie remake of Ray Bradbury's classic Fahrenheit 451 is still mired in development hell, according to Alan Nierob, a publicist for Mel Gibson's Icon Entertainment, which owns the rights to the film. Despite persistent stories that Bradbury himself has been asked to write and rewrite the new script, Nierob declined comment on the script's progress but said that Gibson is waiting to see if he'd be interested in starring as the male lead, Montag, or directing the film, once a script is approved.

WELL, FOR GOSH - AM I NUTS - OR HAS WILMA GONE CRAZY? MOON CRAZY?
WILMA / YOUR SPACE SUIT? YOUR OXYGEN HELMET? YOU LITTLE IDIOT, YOU'LL DIE IN THIS THIN AIR! GET BACK IN THE SHIP!
THERE ISN'T ANY SHIP DARLING!

Buck Rogers

★ Start making plans now! Sony Pictures announced that it will release its big-budget Godzilla remake May 20, 1998, the Wednesday before Memorial Day. With Dean Devlin and Roland Emmerich (both of Independence Day) at the helm and starring Matthew Broderick, Hank Azaria, and Harry Shearer, the film is filming in New York City. Speaking of Memorial Days, word is that the first Star Wars prequel will hit theaters Memorial Day 1999.

★ Speaking of Sony, Variety reported that the studio recently won a ruling from the MPAA arbitration that requires Miramax to stop using the name Scream as the title of the Wes Craven fright-fest.

It seems that Sony has said that Scream is a little too close to Screamers, its 1996 science-fiction disappointment starring Peter Weller. The two studios are still working things out, with Sony not holding up development of Miramax's Scream II, set to open next year.

★ OK, so while we all know about Neil Gaiman writing and possibly directing the movie adaptation of Death: The High Cost of Living, did you know that there's another project out there that's frightfully similar in nature with big-name star power attached? It's called Meet Joe Black, and it stars Brad Pitt as Death, who's taking some time off from his duties to learn about life from a rich executive. The upcoming film also stars Marcia (First Wives Club) Gay Harden and Claire (The Rock) Forlani.

★ Cowabunga, dudette — or Teenage Mutant PC Turtles.

This fall, look for the new live-action Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles: The Next Mutation series on the Fox Kids Network. Produced by Saban, the merchandising mogul behind the successes of the Power Rangers and Big Bad Beetleborgs, the series will be done in the same live-action style as the three Turtles movies, feature the evolution and continued mutation of the characters, and one other major development: a female ninja turtle, Venus DeMilo.

According to the story, Venus was accidentally left behind when Splinter rescued the original four turtles from the glowing green ooze in the sewer.

Venus floated to Chinatown, where she was found by Chung I, a martial arts master. Told by her master on his deathbed to seek out four others like her in New York, Venus joined forces with the four other Turtles to fight crime. Toy collectors will want to keep an eye out for the full merchandise line in support of the new show.

PRESERVATION and STORAGE PRODUCTS by GERBER

Buy From THE SOURCE, 'The One-Stop Shop'

Why Are Our Prices so Low?

1. We invented the first Mylar® sealed sleeves in 1979.
2. Our 1985 patent is used by all our competitors.
3. Our patented equipment is sold and used world-wide, including two machines purchased by the Library of Congress.
4. We build all our own equipment. We do not buy from others. We keep the highest producing machines for ourselves & sell the rest.
5. We have patents or patents pending on many of our unique products.
6. Most importantly, our business logic is NOT to sell as high as the traffic will bear; but as low as possible to make our products available to more collectors. We take our Company Slogan seriously.

Stan Drake died. Oh, no. Stan Drake was and is a great influence to me and my artwork. I discovered his work while at the School of Visual Arts about 10 years ago. I have the Kelly Green graphic novels #1-3 and three Heart of Juliet Jones collections. That's all fine, but a couple of years after college, a friend of a friend set up an appointment with Drake at his Westport, Conn., studio for me. Boy, was I nervous. However, he completely set me at ease with his good humor. I told him that I loved his work, and, as a matter of fact, my wife loved his work.

Drake had just returned from the San Diego convention and couldn't believe any of the younger generation knew who he was, and I said he truly influenced me. The sheer beauty of his technique and art was and is a wonder. Drake also told of artists he admired, such as Bill Sienkiewicz and Al Williamson. He was also nice enough to look at my artwork and he said he liked it. He said that he wouldn't change much if he inked the work.

At the time, I was losing confidence in my work and here was Stan Drake complimenting it. I was on cloud nine! He also gave me a phone number to call and to use his name to try and get a job.

I spent about an hour and a half on a Saturday morning with Drake. To think Stan Drake could take time out from drawing Blondie and other projects just to see a young artist.

Even today, I think back to that meeting and get inspiration.

In the CBG article about Stan Drake's passing, Jerry Ordway was right: Drake was amazing, and I know that I borrow from Stan Drake almost every time I draw. However, not only was Stan Drake a great artist, he was a great man.

First, regarding the letter from Joe Kubert, who was replying to Daryl Broussard's letter: Boy, was it nice to hear something nice about Marvel for a change; it has been a while. That it's sponsoring scholarships to the Kubert school, with no strings attached, is great.

Also, kudos to Archie Comics for its donation of comics to the elementary school teacher.

On a sadder note, my condolences to John Ostrander and family on Kim Yale's untimely death. I never met Yale but have talked to Ostrander at cons and on CompuServe a couple of times. His work does him credit; when he wrote Jink for Warp graphics, the main character was a carefree, life-loving individual. It's hard to believe the same man has been writing The Spectre so well.

I can't help but wonder how this event will affect the writing. The Spectre deals with death on a daily basis; he deals death and saves people from untimely deaths. The Spectre has gone beyond death and cheated it. Maybe years from now, I might ask him how it affected his writing, when it won't seem so tacky to do so.

I noticed in your independent price guide, in the listings for the original Elfquest series, the additional info for one issue was "Elf orgy." I e-mailed Richard Pini for his thoughts on it, and he didn't mind; he agreed with me that it might bring in some new readers. They would be disappointed, though; I think they only have those orgies when both the moons are full.

Thanks yet again for the free ads. I have sold a lot of comics taking up space and met a lot of cool people.

Just a few random thoughts from an old (39) comics fan who tries to keep up:

• The new Superman seems to lack a certain humanity. The blip in sales will pass, and that something that makes Superman special will have been lost. I don't know if the powers that be at DC realize that. For what it's worth, the new hero is jazzy, but he's not unique or primary, certainly not Superman — more like warmed-over Firestorm or Blue Devil.

• Wouldn't Mike Mignola be the perfect artist for a comics adaptation of Lives of the Monster Dogs, the acclaimed debut novel by Kristen Bakis, now released?

• I shall miss the real Green Lantern (Hal Jordan, of course) and the whole guardian mythos, uniform, etc., that went with it. Again, DC didn't know what it had.

• Don't you think that the Amalgam comics are merely a prelude to DC (Time Warner) absorbing Marvel and its characters, lock, stock, and barrel? Wouldn't bet against it.

• The top regular monthly series, for

UH-OH, THE SCRIPT FOR THIS WEEK'S EPISODE HASN'T ARRIVED YET.
HOLY HOLSTEINS, THIS ISN'T GOOD.
NO IT ISN'T. WHAT DO OTHER SUPER-HERO BOOKS DO WHEN THEY'RE SHORT ON IDEAS AND LONG SPACE TO FILL?
I DUNNO.
FIGHT, I GUESS.
THIS EXPLAINS A LOT ABOUT THE GENRE.

• Quick! Read the March 17 USA Today about the pilot for the proposed Justice League of America live-action series. Could be a winner! Now, which JLA(s) do they draw from? The series could be exciting for comics fans and for the general audience, if the character interplay and ensemble casting (à la St. Elsewhere) were emphasized. On the other hand, one dreads the possible soap-opera-camp-tongue-in-cheek elements, of which the Keith Giffen JLA had plenty.

I just finished Bill Schelly's latest excursion into the past of comics fandom, and it is the best yet. Fandom's Finest Comics is a collection of comic-book stories taken from the pages of classic fanzines.

In many cases, the book showcases the first work of creators who went on to be among the most significant in the history of comics: Robert Crumb, Roy Thomas, Marv Wolfman, and Jerry Ordway. There are also samples of mainstays of the era whose work is often quite impressive: Ronn Foss, Biljo White, "Grass" Green, Landon

By now you have probably received the inaugural edition of our catalog, S.C.A.N.S. After consulting with many retailers and publishers alike, we designed the catalog to suit the needs of the entire comic book community. We have tailored our catalog for ease of use and a clear direct way to identify which products will best suit your individual clientele, without giving any preferential treatment to one particular group of publishers or manufacturers. We believe that you, the direct market retailers, are fully capable of deciding which products are cool or hot. We at SyCo know that no one should dictate which products you buy or how you go about getting them. We know that no one knows your business better than you do, being in the direct line of fire from the fans, collectors and suppliers. At SyCo you'll receive the following:

1. Low thresholds to achieve high discounts: No Minimums. Spend $800 gross and receive a discount of 50% and it gets higher from there.

2. Free shipping on all orders over $300.00 net.

3. Ease of ordering: by phone, fax, mail, email, and soon, direct over the Internet.

4. Customer Service: This is why we are here. Problems, Questions, Suggestions. What ever we can do to help you increase your sales, we will help find solutions.

5. Product Line: As of now there are over 3000 different products available and the list grows daily. Granted, at this time, and let us stress at this time, we cannot offer you all of the products that are available through other outlets. What we do offer you is the complete line of products from all of the publishers and manufacturers we carry. Not just future selections and limited back issues. We offer them all. If they are available, we will get them for you.

6. Returnability: We back this up with a limited, no questions asked return policy, which allows you the flexibility to try new products and not have to absorb all of the risk.

At SyCo, we believe that you should have a direct input in how our business is run. We need your suggestions and ideas so we may continue to serve you better. Our lines are always open. Call us at 1-888-URSYCO2 (1-888-877-9262)

Chesney, and Bill Spicer. These and others give us the adventures of such characters as The Eclipse, Doctor Weird, The Human Cat, The Eye, and The Bestest League of America. There is action, adventure, humor, super-heros, cavemen, and even a jungle lord.

All in black and white for $20.95 (postage and handling included) from Bill Schelly, P.O. Box 27471, Seattle, WA 98125. And a word to the wise — Bill's prior books have all quickly gone out of print.

The problem with revamping major characters is that it's almost always done to make unique, complicated, and potentially fascinating characters more mainstream and thus easier to handle. A few random examples:

Susan Storm Richards is a character I'd give my eyeteeth to see interpreted from a feminist perspective. Even more than Lois Lane, she symbolizes the inherent sexism in many comics: a reluctant heroine who's never been in control of her life, who's been forced by circumstances and by the men in her life into one stiff, confining role after another, who's never been permitted her own identity. (Do you realize in the entire 40-plus years she's existed, her dreams of becoming an actress have never once been taken seriously?)

She's been trapped playing nursemaid to men and being "protected" by other men who insist she's too weak and stupid to deal with the world, and her entire career as a heroine has been thrust on her entirely against her will, at the cost of her own desires. And none of this has ever been dealt with.

The closest the exclusively male writers have ever come to acknowledging The Invisible Woman might not be entirely thrilled with her existence as "the distaff member of the Fantastic Four" is the creation of Malice, Sue's evil other persona, invariably presented as a rabble-rousing troublemaker. In his Heroes Reborn approach to The Fantastic Four, Brandon Lee tossed all this out and turned Sue into a tough-talking businesswoman. Certainly, this was meant to improve the character and pacify feminist readers, but it's a cop-out, erasing the problem instead of dealing with it.

Taking Susan Storm Richards seriously as a woman, addressing her issues, analyzing her relationship with Reed (not to mention Franklin, Johnny, Namor, et al.) from her side instead of just confining her to the standard female role — well, that's too hard and too scary. Better to just sidestep all that and turn her into a different, more fashionable caricature.

Power Pack's situation was, if anything, more extreme. What initially attracted me to these characters was their complexity.

They were realistically drawn kid characters, not the shallow, brainless clichés usually trotted out. (Note: most comics writers generally have a normal boy character and/or a normal girl; variations on the theme beyond the most extreme cartoonishness is completely out of their grasp.) Moreover, Power Pack, a kid comic book grounded in, but not limited to, super-hero and science-fiction concepts and based on classic children's fantasy, had incredible range. If one understood the Pack's mileu, one could do almost anything with these characters. They were capable of things one could never even try to get away with in a "grown-up" comic.

Marvel took this vast potential and tossed it aside, instead trying to find a rut to drop the Pack into. When playing them as flying public-service announcements didn't work, attempts were made to refashion them into a mini-Fantastic Four, a junior New Mutants — even, in New Warriors, trying to mold Alex Power (and dumping his siblings) into the standard teen super-hero.

No attempt was made to approach these characters as they stood and to see what they were capable of. It was easier and cheaper to just try to turn them into the same old crud one more time. And, of course, the failure was all Power Pack's. Obviously, kid comics just don't sell.

This business with Green Lantern is really just a variation on the theme. Hal Jordan is an old character with a long history. Finding some way to make him interesting and appealing would take a lot of imagination and inventiveness, especially considering they'd already trashed everything that made the character unique before this started. Kyle, on the other hand, is the kind of dull, standard-issue, pseudo-hip, regurgitated retread these guys could write in their sleep. Thus, Hal's out, Kyle's in.

What it boils down to is that writers are trying to use claims of innovation and the need to create new interest in old characters as an excuse for lazy writing. Sorry, but I'm not impressed. I do not care to see characters dumbed down because the creative staff doesn't feel like bothering to do them right.

First, thank you for publishing two of my letters already. It's always gratifying to see your name in print, and, as a result, I have received letters and comics from many other readers. Everyone has been so generous. Thanks.

But something has been bothering me. I was surprised to find that few people supported what I said about character changes. I can't even say from demographics that it is only older fans or only men. Case-in point is the number of negative responses to Superman's costume change I saw in Superman #124's letters col. Even my dad, who doesn't read comics, called me and blasted the whole concept. But, as I did with him, I'll defend my position again.

Change is not only beneficial, it's inevitable. Comics have already changed so much from their inception they are nigh unrecognizable in comparison. Their size, shape, titles, characters, even art and dialogue have evolved and mutated.

If this hadn't happened, they would have died. We would have tired of them, left them behind like the many other toys we left in childhood. And perhaps comics don't thrive as they used to, but we must consider their competition

now. TV, movies, and mass-produced books and magazines usurp comics' place.

Writers and artists of today have a daunting task: facing these factors and creating something that not only entertains but excites us, too. Their responsibility to the fans, first and foremost, is not to stick with the same concept. It's to expand.

Today's Flash costume looks very different from the original Flash's costume. He isn't even the original Flash, and we already know he won't be the last. But his incarnation is still commendable. Comparatively, the change in Superman is small. They've removed his cape and given him something new, but he hasn't changed. He still is a Boy Scout, defending the weak and the innocent. For goodness sake, they haven't killed him — just changed his clothes! They even married him. From experience, I'd say that's a bigger change, with greater consequences. Yet everybody was in favor of the wedding.

So many people are resistant to change in any form, even though they often like the result. I hope the editors at DC keep Superman the way he is for a long while, and those who threaten to stop buying Superman will come back, learning finally that the clothes (or cape or ring or harpoon) do not make the man. Or the woman. The line of Superman comics does not resort to gimmicks. When Superman died, it was a well-developed story with far-reaching impact, and DC didn't bring him back in the next issue with a lame plot. We had to endure the mystery of four new Supermen, both recognizable and yet strange. And, although we got our Big Blue back, it was an arduous, and enriching, experience.

This new change isn't meant to easy on any of us. It's meant to be tough to deal with, for fans and Superman alike. Are we willing to give up on Superman so easily? As Shakespeare wrote: "You have put him down, lady, you have put him down."

"So I would not he should do me, my lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools."

That's advice I think we should heed in this case. Give those writers and editors and artists a chance.

Comics are still a business, and many decisions will be profit-based, but that doesn't automatically make them terrible decisions. Most, I think, can be and are well thought out and planned accordingly.

Is that what they call tough love?

This is a change of subject, but there are two more things I wanted to mention. First, I wanted to thank Peter David, who wrote a great personal response to a letter I sent — and then remembered me when we met at Mega-Con. He took time from a busy schedule to talk to a fan, and I really appreciate it. I hope I am always as gracious to professionals in turn.

Second, a new and unusual comic book that deserves a chance is Amanda and Gunn by Jimmie Robinson. It's an Image title, and it many sound like it's not for you, but you'll never know until you try it. If it's not available from your retailer, ask him or her to reorder it. I'm sure there are more available somewhere, whether from Diamond or Image. Unusual and creative!

Attention, professionals and aspiring talent alike:

I have been debating whether to write this letter for a while now. It took the deaths of my two studio mates to bring me to this point. I took the time to discuss this with Maggie Thompson over the phone before writing and hope that you all can appreciate what I'm about to say and that we can learn from it before our current attitude leaves us all in the dark.

There seems to be a lot of talk these days about the validity of the employment practices of the industry. A lot of aspiring talents and fans in general have complained in hushed tones about certain things. I hear comments like, "Geez! Doesn't so-and-so write enough comics already?" or "Another one of those clone hacks! Can't they find anybody different?" Thankfully, most of this comes from those who aren't in the know about how this business works. So I thought it might do us all some good if we got some of this information out in the open.

I've been in semiprofessional and professional comics off and on as a writer-illustrator, submissions editor, and editor for about eight years. For those of you who haven't heard of me, my most recent work was with Gravitywell Productions of San Diego, Calif., as editorial consultant to its internet comics titles Survivalist, Spookworks, and Scopes. I resigned late last year in order to freelance as a writer and illustrator.

I can sympathize with the sentiments of frustration and exasperation. Everybody, pro and amateur alike, puts a lot of effort into their work, and, whether or not you're published, there's no shame in having a little pride in your accomplishments. I've seen a lot of friends in this business drift in and out of the field — people who I feel are equal, if not superior, talent to the current establishment in terms of professional quality. There are longtime veterans who are out of work whom I don't know personally, but I sure wouldn't want them to go without, if I could help it. And there are dozens of newcomers I've seen who I'd think would certainly deserve a shot now and again, even if only for doing filler material.

This would include my recently deceased studio mates, both of whom were terminally ill with kidney disease and were too far down on the wait list for transplants. In the two years I worked with them, they never once received a rejection notice. I have to admit to a tinge of bitterness when I think about that. The sad truth is that most members of the professional establishment in today's industry are barely holding onto their positions by their fingernails.

But I will say this in defense of the industry. The average writer currently working in the field averages five titles a month. The average pay per script is approximately $775 per script (At a $35 per page pay scale, as per the 1996 Writer's Market Handbook, page 55). That means $3875 per month or $46,500 annual gross income, excluding royalties (and royalties usually aren't much). The national average gross income per household is $43,890. So maybe a writer needs to write five comics a month just to keep in step and out of the poverty level.

Oh, So?

Why? Because a third of that $46,500 goes to taxes. Blow off $15,500. Now you're at $31,000. Many writers and editors live around the companies, in the Greater New York and New England area or in California. The average cost of housing in these areas? From discussing this with friends I have who live in these areas, rent ranges from $1800 to $2000 a month, easy. Shoot down another $21,000 to $24,000 a year. That leaves $7000 to $10,000 a year to live on for food, clothing, and the other bills (like phone, electric, gas, etc.). Can you can make a living on that? Now some of you might understand why a writer like Peter David also writes novels, movie and TV screenplays, and short fiction, as well.

Editors often receive even less pay, and that's part of the reason why we see them freelancing as writers. And you should note that, for the most part, they work on second and third-tier titles or they give up their editorships once they get a premier title with high sales.

It's not as though this practice hasn't been going on for decades; why all the fuss about it now? I admit I'm not especially pleased when editors do this, but, having been an editor myself, I can understand their position.

Artists don't have quite as much difficulty, once employed (though there are probably 10 or 15 artists vying for one position for every one writer vying for a writer's position). The penciller can receive a page rate up to about triple that of the writer, which is why one artist can usually make a living drawing one title; inkers tend to make maybe 40% more than the writer, which is why they work on two or three titles a month average. And, of course, they have their art and sketches for sale and additional ways of making money from their work that the writer and editor cannot claim.

What I think needs to be seen by us all is that today, the mainstream companies are severely lacking in diverse qualitative product. And companies are trying to address this situation. DC has broken ground with Paradox Press, expanding its Vertigo line, and adding Helix. Image is starting to help out a lot of self-publishers by doing business with them. Groups like Sirius Entertainment and Caliber Press are also doing their part, to the limited extent they are financially capable of.

The comics industry has depended for far too long on 30 to 50-year-old concepts, other people's ideas from Hollywood and overseas, and from other forms of fiction. This is the main reason ours is considered a backwater field.

Instead of embracing our life preservers, we should, in fact, be breaking out into uncharted areas of all genres, for all ages, especially for younger readers. I know that many of you agree with me. At least, you've said as much to me at conventions. We've got the talent and ideas, so let's address this situation. There are things that we can do to change things for the better, but first we have to be willing to stop ignoring the problems we face in hopes of their disappearing.

In today's post-literate society, we face more competition from outside the publishing arena than ever before. Television, film, and computers have crippled not only our division, but that of the novel and short-fiction magazine, as well. The tragic problem we seem to be facing is that society is beginning to abandon the written form of expression altogether in favor of these other forms, which can do nothing more than cripple our society on an emotional and intellectual level. We should treat each other with mutual respect, placing no professional or amateur above another. We're all simply humans who eat, drink, sleep, and breathe (among other things). We have found the enemy, and it is us, for we bicker, squabble, and wage verbal wars in this industry as though it were the deadliest game of cutthroat ever to be played. And the longer we play at it, the more likely it is that the throat that gets cut will be our own.

Let's stop bickering about creators' rights and censorship (even though they are worthwhile causes). What good will fighting for these causes do if there's no industry left? We're all of us to blame, and it's time we accepted that and tried to do something about it, professionals and fans alike. Put your egos in the happy box and hide it away in the back of your closet. Ready? Let's get to work.

And now, I expressly address aspiring talents. I understand the frustration that you all experience as you try to get your opportunity in this form of expression. I have had three rejections in regards to 84 proposals in eight years. And my story is not uncommon. Even longtime industry veterans can wait as long as two, three years on a project for approval. And I guarantee that more than one professional will tell you that at times they've never heard back from editors — even after the editors called them first. That is the nature of the beast that is this industry.

That doesn't mean I think that you should give up. I truly believe that our field is in desperate need of new blood, in all categories. But, if there were any advice I would give, it would be this:

• Get a formal college education — at least a Bachelor's Degree, preferably in the sciences, where you can at least learn about things that you can apply to comics and to the real world. Artists should get trained in computer graphics, commercial art, and illustration; writers should have a double concentration in creative writing and literature and/or literary analysis and criticism (for those of you who want to try editing). A background in education can't hurt, either.

• Understand where everyone else stands. In order to really be a professional, one really should at least try to understand the backgrounds of fellow aspiring talents and of professionals. We all have made sacrifices to get where we are (even if some of us aren't very far). About 80% of all professional writers currently teach or have taught at the high-school and/or college level, in a wide variety of subjects ranging from English to the various sciences to history, etc.

One year ago the "ANIMAL QUACKERS" art book by Carl Barks was introduced. The entire edition sold out with a single advertisement in the CBG. This book featured a new universe of Barks' characters. This Gemstone book was designed by Russ Cochran. The original paintings for this book were principally sold in the early '70s. The fine tuned ("clean up") pencil drawings were carefully stored in anticipation of the book.

This art will be unveiled for the first time at the Carl Barks Studio booths during the San Diego convention. Each piece is available separately. Wholesale prices are available for five pieces. Please refer to the book "Animal Quackers" for your selection.

On Friday, July 18th at 10:30 a.m. 50 autographed Carl Barks' comic books will be sold for $10. Please form an organized line. At previous conventions security has been bewildered by the sudden swarming of duck people.

We are pleased to announce, that once again The Little Lulu Collectors meet at the Carl Barks Studio Booth. The time it is Saturday, July 19th at 3:00 p.m. This collectors' group is headed by Ed Buchner. All Tubby and Lulu fans are welcome. Please advise our booth of any Little Lulu or Tubby collectible sightings.

Memberships in "Uncle Scrooge Collectors International" are available. The official coat of arms - on an elaborate lapel pin (designed this year by Carl Barks), membership card and newsletter are available for $20. Rev. Ed Bergen, president, has announced the fifth annual national meeting. It will take place this September. This event will be announced in the newsletter.

To order the new 1997 fine art Disney book "Barks Treasury" phone (407) 560-4565.

Oh, So?

Others specialize in fields outside of the publishing arena, most commonly scientific and legal fields. Only about 2% of all professional writers (and here I am encompassing all forms of writing, not just comics) work as full-time writers. And I've yet to meet the person who started his professional life as a full-time writer.

As far as artists go, keep in mind that many of today's talents have also worked as commercial illustrators, animators, architects, and in a variety of other related fields. And, yes, they sometimes teach, also.

If you understand where those who came before you are coming from, you'll have a better appreciation, not only for what they do, but how and why they do it. And it'll instill better work ethics and professional behavior in you that can pay off in the long run.

The last thing an editor or submissions director needs is for an aspiring talent to come across as though we owe him a job. Appreciating us for what we do will mean we might give you more serious consideration in the future, or maybe even a job on the spot. (Hey, ours is a thankless job. I mean, how many submissions directors sign comics at conventions? Believe it or not, discovering someone can be a great joy for us.)

You probably won't break into this field, regardless of how talented you may be. Those of us who are in are damned lucky, and we work our butts off to keep the establishment happy so we "don't have to worry." (Yeah, right.) We all have our own personal and professional lives to deal with, as well as those of our friends, all of whom are potentially as deserving as you.

I hope that this piece will instigate discussions. And good luck to us all.

We're gonna need it.

Re: The Mass O' Media column in CBG #1223:

Oh, my, how this strange engine that we call a memory retains water after a few short years.

I'm referring to the Justice League movie plot under development at CBS — specifically, the role of The Flash. If my memory serves me, isn't John Wesley Shipp still under contract to portray The Flash? I read in Variety or Hollywood Reporter some years back that he was still receiving royalties from foreign sales of The Flash compilation videos. Why haven't they asked him back ? Why do we have a troupe of unknowns (except for John Kassir as The Atom) to portray The Flash, Green Lantern, J'onn J'onzz, Fire, and Ice?

I noticed that you and R.C. Harvey have mentioned wonderful reference books for the enthusiast. I have developed an itch lately for historical information on the actual collecting of comic books. There are many collector stories that I'm interested in knowing more about.

For instance, who found the various pedigree collections? When? How did they find them? Who pointed out that they had value to collectors (or were the owners already aware of it)? In other words, what are their pedigrees? Who found the ahscan edition of Flash and Thunder Comics? When and how did they know what they were looking at? What is the genealogy of extremely rare comics like Action #1, Marvel Comics #1, Amazing Man #5 (#1) and Detective Comics #27? That is to say, who owned the comics first and whose hands did they end up in later?

I know that some of the owners may have chosen not to disclose their identities for security or even (gasp!) social reasons, but the events are far more interesting to me than the people involved (although their backgrounds are of considerable interest in regard to the circumstances of the discovery).

I was interested to read a story of the "original" Superman cover that had been ripped up and thrown away many years ago — only to be rescued by a friend of Jerry Shuster, put away in the back of a desk drawer, and rediscovered many years later in that same desk drawer and further preserved by a fan. This story was very interesting, and I'd like to read more anecdotes like this.

I see lots of advertisements for various pedigreed collections and comics from those collections, but I have not had any way of getting information on the pedigree itself. Overstreet lists several pedigrees but no longer gives any explanation of what the Mile High Collection (or any other collection, for that matter) is.

The desire for this information really has put a bee in my bonnet, and I would like to know if there is a reference guide listing at least some of this information so that I can compile further data in regard to more specific questions.

Again, I am looking initially for a reference that details these events and those involved at the very least on a superficial level. If no information in a book or collection of articles of this type is available, I would then like to ask for information on these events from those who can at least give a reliable accounting of said events and persons.

Anyone with information (about a reference guide or separate anecdotes) can contact me. Be warned that I am a skeptic and have heard plausible explanations of this sort before by people who heard it from "a friend of a friend," so if you are sending me stories about the abovementioned or related items, I will likely wish to ask questions as to the veracity of any anecdotes you forward.

[I have seen sample page layouts of a book in the midst of production that may answer many of your questions. Though the pages I saw didn't deal with the questions you raise, I suspect that the author will deal with some of them.

Sound tantalizing? My hopes are that the book will ship within the year — and when it gets closer to release time I'll have more information to tell you. (It's not a Krause Publications project, by the way, just in case you wondered.) The author pointed out some entries to me which covered information I haven't seen dealt with in reference materials to this point. The entries were excellently written and informative. Stay tuned.]

These are all people who have one or more important "firsts" to their credit. Each of them was the first to do something memorable in comics. We all know what they've done.

But for some reason, no one ever gives me credit for my important "first." I was the first person to ever mail a package to DC Comics via Federal Express.

It was in 1975. FedEx was only months old. I'm not sure it even did any runs except for New York/Los Angeles. Owing to another writer's default, I had a "rush" script assignment for DC. When the script arrived there — days before anyone there had dared expect it — an assistant was instantly on the phone to me. She demanded to know when I'd dispatched it, how much it had cost, etc., and didn't believe that I'd paid that much or that it had come so fast. She also didn't believe me when I told her that DC would someday shuttle all its scripts and art around via FedEx. See? I can be right once in a while.

Before '75, the only way to mail anything cross-country overnight was via a number of special courier services. I had to use one once, and it hit me up for 60 bucks. (Actually, there was a cheaper way. All the TV networks have "overnight pouches." Once, when a package absolutely, positively had to be at Marvel the next morning, I called upon a chum at NBC's New York headquarters. She arranged for my parcel to go back as an NBC inter-office shipment and then messengered it — also on the peacock's dime — over to Marvel. The contents — need I add? — had absolutely nothing to do with NBC Television.)

Mostly, we relied on the U.S. Post Office, which hadn't even invented Express Mail yet. The best it had to offer was something called Special Delivery, which offered no guarantees. It usually got there before regular mail — but just barely.

This was one of many reasons why DC, Marvel, and other New York publishers frowned on their creators living too far from Manhattan. Today, FedEx, faxes, and modems make it easy to shuttle art and scripts around the world. This efficiency, however, creates new problems.

Many of my years in comics have been spent working with one of my all-time favorite artists, Dan Spiegle. Dan is a wonderful gentleman and he also happens to be appallingly fast and diligent. If Dan says the story will be done at 2:47 on Tuesday, the story is done by 2:47 on Tuesday, no questions asked.

I'd be impressed if even a lousy artist could deliver so consistently and promptly. That Dan's work is always good — and devoid of cut corners — makes him all the more remarkable. Don't believe me? Ask anyone who has worked with Dan. If you're an editor and your job description involves making sure a comic book is drawn and off to the printer on time, you pray nightly for guys like Spiegle. When I'm working as a writer-editor, I have mixed feelings about this. The editor half of me is cheering how swiftly the issue gets done, while my writer side is going, "Take your time! What's your hurry?"

Now, matters of quality aside, I happen to be a very fast writer. To keep up with Sergio Aragonés, you have to be. Still, doing comics with Spiegle was like catering for the Tasmanian Devil: He devoured scripts faster than I could fry them up. Every time I thought I'd gained some ground on him, I'd find out otherwise and hurriedly have to write more.

Back in the Special Delivery days, I had a little cushion. Dan would call up and say, "I'll need more script next week." Now that overnight services have been invented, he calls up and says, "I'll need more script tomorrow." Before fax machines, this call necessitated the usage of FedEx or its postal service clone, Express Mail.

The cut-off time for Express Mail at my local Post Office is 5 p.m., which I almost never make. The cut-off time for Federal Express is 6 p.m., which I sometimes make, usually not before 5:59:30. If I miss it, it means that I will be driving out to Century Boulevard later that evening.

Century is the street that leads into L.A. International Airport. The main Post Office terminal is located out there, just a few blocks east of LAX. It's open until 8 p.m., but that's not what interests us. Of greater importance is the 24-hour Express Mail station by the loading dock.

At least, it was over by the loading dock the last time I was out there, which was before Dan and all my other co-workers bought fax machines. Some even bought modems and got on-line. Today, I can transmit pages to any collaborator without leaving the chair I'm seated in at the moment. Much more convenient.

Still, few instances of progress are without some sense of loss. I don't actually think I miss the late night Grand Prix to the airport but I'm not as totally glad to be done with it as I should be. When I was doing Scooby-Doo or Blackhawk or Crossfire with Spiegle, it usually meant one — sometimes, two — sprints per week to Century Boulevard in the very late p.m.-early a.m. There, a miracle would routinely occur — one which makes it nearly impossible for me to speak ill of the Post Office.

Many people feel — and of course, by "many people," I mean only me — that the U.S. Postal Service often gets a bum rap. Everyone has horror stories of posting a vital letter and then having it not arrive for weeks, if it even arrives at all. They mailed it when they were supposed to mail it but, owing to postal incompetence, century plants bloomed and died, while the letter made its way across town and/or disappeared into the Bermuda Triangle. They shout, "You didn't get it? But I mailed it on time! Drat that Post Office!"

98% of the time, we know they're lying. But we always accept that and mutter, "That's the Post Office for you," because, just last week, we didn't mail something when we were supposed to and we're going to lie when we get caught. (My own experience has been that, when you mail a letter, you usually get a lot more service than you have a right to expect for 32¢.)

And, once in a while, the Post Office does the impossible. Spiegle lives outside Los Angeles — a drive of at least two, more like three, hours. When I was Express Mailing scripts to him, the U.S. Postal Service managed to provide same-day service.

You read that right: Not next-day service — same-day service. If I mailed it on Tuesday, he had it on Tuesday. The same Tuesday.

My cut-off time was 2 a.m. I'd finish as many pages as humanly possible by 1:15 a.m., at which point — come hell or Hewlett-Packard — I would start my printout. I'd address the Express Mail label while the printer spat out the pages, usually jamming on every third sheet, as it always does when you're in a hurry. Then I'd cram the output into an Overnight Letter Pak, hop into the Mercury, and steer for Century Boulevard.

Just shy of 2 a.m., I'd race up to the loading dock and sprint inside with my little envelope of Blackhawk script. The same lady, every trip for years, would hand me my receipt and say, "You're just in time. But you really shouldn't cut it this close."

As my parcel disappeared into a hamper, I would undergo that moment of decompression — every writer knows it — when a deadline has been met, and the body and brain can both go slack. About then, it would usually dawn on me that I hadn't eaten since lunch. I'd stop at the aptly-named Fatburger (open 24 hours) and, by 3 a.m., I'd be home and horizontal.

At 6:30 a.m., Dan — who insists on getting up at such ungodly hours — would get the call from his local Post Office that it had an Express Mail package for him. He'd drive over in his Mercury, pick it up, and be penciling by 7. I must have mailed 100 packages to him, and not once did the postal folks fail to get the mail to him in under seven hours. Same-day service.

Somewhere around 11 a.m., I'd wake up and stagger downstairs, thinking, "Well, at least Dan has enough script to hold him for a couple of days." Then I'd play back the messages on my answering machine and hear, "Hi, Mark. Hey, this is a good one ... drawing real fast. Think you can get me some more pages real soon?"

Stunned, I would stagger back to my keyboard and start writing crowd scenes with thousands of people in them or characters with intricate costumes that required lots of research: anything to slow the guy down a little. Alas, these little scripting speed bumps never bought me much time.

Today, thanks to fax machines, those 2 a.m. runs to the Post Office (and thence to Fatburger) are history — but Dan is still drawing 'em faster than I can write 'em. The last story we did together, I finished four pages at around 5 a.m. and transmitted them to Spiegle. By the time I awoke, he had them all done, and they were, of course, perfect.

2 a.m. is my deadline for Spiegle. If it has to be in Manhattan tomorrow morn, I have to get it out to Century Boulevard by 10 p.m. (That's for guaranteed delivery. Once I got a package there at midnight, but it still got to DC Comics before noon. With the time difference, that's nine hours. As I said, sometimes they work miracles.)

If age 12 is a personal "Golden Age of Comics," is age 13 the "Polyester Age of Comics"? I recently unearthed a handwritten, uncirculated fanzine I produced in 1973 while in junior high, and I was genuinely shocked by how morose I was about comics at the time. The cover featured a one-shot hero named The Thwarter (I remember as much about him as I do about 95% of the super-heroes introduced in the boom of the early '90s), but the only article was "The Decline of Marvel and DC." I'll give you some annotated excerpts:

• "Adventure Comics, DC's oldest title, is now [reduced to] bimonthly! And it features pretty sick features compared to 30 years ago — or even seven!"

(I was well-versed in Legion lore from 1966 and up, but of course I owned zero 1943 issues of Adventure on which to base my learned opinions.)

• "Flash, World's Finest, and Justice League of America are bimonthly, also."

(OK, I do remember reading the 1974 JLA/JSA team-up in the bleachers of my brother's Little League game and being depressed that the grand tradition had been reduced to a one-parter that merely messed up the life of Sandy the Golden Boy.)

• "Joe Giella is gone from [inking Dick Dillin on] JLA — and the art looks weird."

(A quick check of my JLA collection confirms my suspicion that Dick Giordano was the new inker. Sorry. The art looks mighty fine in retrospect.)

• "The Green Lantern tales in Flash are supposedly back-ups, but The Scarlet Speedster's own feature is padded filler material with a minimum of real action."

(I guess it had faux action like that on QVC.)

• "Wanted: The World's Most Dangerous Villains is now again featuring semi-recent tales. And the old tales are from the slack period of the Golden Age — and are best forgotten."

(And here I thought I was always a gobbler-up of all things Golden Age. I wish I remembered what the "slack period" of the Golden Age was so I could warn concerned mothers about it.)

• "GL/GA, Teen Titans, New Gods, and Forever People have all bitten the dust."

(Patience, lad. Plop! and other life-affirming goodies will be along soon.)

• "Batman Comics [sic] is so much junk with Denny O'Neil gone."

(I guess Denny's mastery as a word-smith inspired me to make such well-developed outbursts of constructive criticism.)

• "Don Heck's art in Wonder Woman is some of his worst. Killing off [WW's mentor] I Ching was a no-no."

(The late Heck and I had a lot of ups and downs. Apparently, I enjoyed his '60s Iron Man. And one of my rare LoCs would praise his work on the 1975 debut of Marvel's The Champions. But I hated his late '70s and early '80s Flash — before raving about his and Gerry Conway's work on Wonder Woman immediately prior to the George Pérez reboot.)

• "Shazam! is the best mag on the stands — but can DC live on one comic?"

(Holy moly, what a turnaround! When I first opened the premiere issue of the much-hyped Shazam! I couldn't believe that this cartoony pap had whipped Superman during the '40s. What can I say? It grew on me. And "live on one comic"? I thought I had been enjoying Kamandi at this time.)

• "DC's circulation is pitiful."

(And would've been even worse, if zombie me hadn't kept purchasing so many of the comics I groused about.)

• "Marvel is better than DC, but it has its faults. Gwen Stacy is dead! Can you imagine killing such a popular supporting character?"

(1997: "Can you imagine killing such a popular supporting character without doing a crossover sequence with an Acclaim character who is also falling to her death? Or maybe Gwen Stacy Snaps Her Neck: The Animated Version?")

• "Hawkeye and Quicksilver have both quit The Avengers."

(Oh, the thrice-cursed finality of it all! What if someday they give Spidey a black costume, kill Reed Richards, or let someone else wield Mjolnir?)

• "Gerry Conway is doing a fair job of scripting The Fantastic Four, while Roy Thomas did a superb job."

(Thomas inspired my critiquing skills, too. Why, just the year before, I had written to my best friend Glen Woodward in perfect politically correct fashion, "Buy Conan or you're retarded." And my college roommate Ken Jobe got a kick out of walking around reciting Conway dialogue like "This stinks to high heaven!")

• "Word balloons keep creeping onto the cover of Doc Savage — marring it to no end."

(At least there were no UPC boxes. Or blurbs announcing "The Man of Bronze — With the — Pay Attention — Mutant Ability to Benefit from Decades of Rigorous Physical and Mental Exercise.")

What lessons can we learn from all this? Creators deserve a second chance to come out of slumps? Tastes can mature? Don't give up on comics? The years have a way of enshrouding everything with a nostalgic mist? This, too, shall pass? But maybe the best lesson from this '70s fiasco is for me to avoid the hypnotherapist. He might dredge up memories of my renting out rooms in the Howard the Duck White House to rich foreigners to fund my campaign for presidency of the Debbie Boone Fan Club or something.

Dan Tyree lives at 1801 Snake Creek Rd., Belfast, TN 37019. He is also advocate-at-large of the international Dick Tracy Fan Club. (Send an SASE to SPEC Productions, P.O. Box 632, Manitou Springs, CO 80829.)

Point of View

For a while, when I got out there at 10 p.m., I'd run into others in the comic-book business, also shipping pages to New York. Our deadline met, we'd sometimes repair down the street for an hour of R-and-R before returning to our respective desks and drawing tables.

Down the street was — and I guess, still is — an establishment that became our hangout. We chose it because it was convenient and offered a friendly atmosphere. The fact that there were young, beautiful women removing their clothes to music was of no importance whatsoever.

Being basically a classy guy, I shall mention no names. This would accomplish nothing and might even get someone in trouble. For example, one artist (who has owed me a page of original art for years) might not like it, if his wife, who reads this column, learned why it always took him so long to mail his work. Gee, I hope I get that page soon.

It started one night when three artists and I all arrived at Express Mail at 9:59 p.m. — two mailing to DC, two mailing to Marvel — and one of them proposed we repair down the street for beverages. The other artists concurred that they were a bit rusty on their anatomy and could do with a bit of study.

Five minutes later, we were being seated around a table that could have doubled as a thumb-tack, close enough to the stage to risk whiplash-by-tassel. A young woman of spectacular physique and minimal garb approached us to take our drink order. (By the way, if you've never been to one of these establishments, the only truly obscene thing that transpires is what they charge for a 7-Up.)

A few minutes later, when she brought our refreshments, she asked, "Aerospace, right?" I guess, out by the airport, a goodly portion of their clientele works in that field. Or maybe we just looked that goofy.

"Comic books," one of the artists said.

Our waitress/stripper brightened. "Comic books? Really? You guys draw comic books?" We all nodded that we did.

That's not quite true in my case. I've drawn a few — usually when I was editor and nothing could be done to stop me — but only a few. I honestly think the comic-book industry has overlooked the massive contribution I have made to the art form by not drawing more.

Usually, though, if you tell civilians you write comic books but don't draw them, you wind up explaining the whole boring process. I find it easier to just say, "Yes, I draw them," and then, since they always ask, I explain, "Yes, I do the words in the bubbles, too. By the way, we call those balloons."

Within moments, our table was surrounded by comely dancers, all asking for drawings. Now, if the four of us had been where a comics convention was taking place and a half-dozen fans had converged to ask for sketches, we'd surely have said no. But there's something about healthy, attractive women wearing almost no clothing that — well, let's just say that a flurry of comics characters suddenly began appearing on damp napkins.

The other guys drew Batman and Spider-Man and The Hulk. I drew Bugs Bunny — and was instantly the darling of all the strippers. This was not because I was the best artist — I wasn't, by far — but because, as Jasmine put it, "Batman and Spider-Man and The Hulk are yuckky. Bugs Bunny is cute."

For the rest of our time there, I got the best service and the most attention. One young lady — who was actually constructed the way they draw women in comics these days — asked me if she could pose for me some time. (I still don't understand why she thought the guy who drew Bugs Bunny would need a figure model. Can you imagine what Elmer Fudd would look like if — oh, never mind.)

Before we left, she slipped me her home phone number. Now, it's possible she had something more than modelling in mind. And I suppose it's possible that she thought I might be willing to lavish a few dollars on her for the pleasure of her presence or the presence of her pleasure. It's even possible, albeit improbable, that she just really, really liked Bugs Bunny. We'll never know. I never called.

I felt I already had had my reward. You see, at comics conventions, the fans stampede past (and over) the guys who draw funny animals to get to the folks who draw Batman, Spider-Man, and The Hulk.

But ,as we left the strip joint that night, three of the top super-hero artists in our business were all thinking the same thing: "I've gotta go home and learn how to draw Bugs Bunny."

SIRIUS CREATORS EARN 6 EISNER NOMINATIONS

SIRIUS Entertainment would like to congratulate Mark Crilley and Joseph Michael Linsner for garnering six Eisner nominations, the most prestigious awards in the comics industry.

Linsner received one of only four nominations in the "Best Painter" category for his work on the DAWN miniseries, while Crilley's monthly book, AKIKO, found recognition for "Best Continuing Series," "Best Comics Publication for a Younger Audience," and "Best Writer/Artist--Humor." Linsner and Crilley were nominated separately in the "Best Comics-Related Product" category:

Linsner for his signed and numbered LILLITH Print, and Crilley for his signed and numbered AKIKO KIMONO Print.

LILLITH sold out prior to publication, while a small number of AKIKO KIMONO remain available.

SIRIUS EQUALS QUALITY COMIC ART

SIRIUS will continue breaking ground in quality "comic art" presentations with the May release of the BALLADS AND SAGAS Portfolio by comics legend Charles Vess. This project is being created in conjunction with Vess' Green Man Press. Following in July is the TOMBSTONE GIRLS Portfolio by master fantasy artist Brom. The portfolio is based on the series of the same name, debuting next Fall. Both portfolios are signed, limited editions and are expected to sell out as quickly as their predecessors.

"My predecessor, Mr. Flutie, may have gone in for all that touchy-feely relating nonsense, but he was eaten!"

— Principal Snyder, played by Armin Shimmerman, in Buffy the Vampire Slayer

Buffy the Vampire Slayer has become my new favorite television program.

There are programs that are better written (Babylon 5 and Homicide, to name two) and programs with better actors (NYPD Blue and The X-Files, to name two more), but Buffy and its cast and its stories are just so much fun that I've watched some episodes twice.

I haven't felt this way about a television series since Hill Street Blues. Hey, Buffy, let's be careful out there.

In case you're wondering, "this way" can be translated as "I never want to miss an episode of this show and would, if not kill, seriously vex, to write the comic-book version thereof."

I am not kidding. Send me a valid contract to write either comic book and the name of the person you want vexed. I'll have done some pretty strange things to them before you can say "fantastic first issue."

The premise of Buffy is simple. Into every generation is born a slayer of vampires, demons, and other creatures that do nasties in the night. To make things worse, Buffy has to fend off these monsters in the most horrific place on the face of the earth. I am, of course, talking about high school.

OK, yeah, it's true that Buffy's high school happens to be in the same neighborhood as the "Hell-Mouth," which is sort of the Ellis Island of evildom. But, even without vampires, witches, and the odd shape-shifting praying mantis, high school is pretty scary.

I should know. I spent most of my freshman year being shoved into a locker by jocks who were on work-release programs. Fortunately, I soon learned to carry a flashlight with me at all times so that I could, at least, do my homework in there.

Buffy (Sarah Michelle Gellar) has moved to Sunnydale after being kicked out of her former school for, in the course of slaying some vampires, burning it down. In this new town, she hopes to put all the craziness of her old life being her. It doesn't work out that way.

On her first day, she bonds with the brainy Willow (Alyson Hannigan) and the smitten Xander (Nicholas Brendon), runs afoul of high-school princess Cordelia (Charisma Carpenter), thinks lustful thoughts about the enigmatic Angel (David Boreanaz), is taken under the figurative wing of librarian and monster watcher Rupert Giles (Anthony Stewart Head, perhaps best known as the Y-chromosome half of the Taster's Choice couple), and, of course, meets a few of the local bloodsuckers. Who's got time for homework?

One of the things I like best about Buffy and her friends is that they face computerized demons and school talent shows with pretty much identical horror.

Everything is a big deal when you're a high-school student, and that's what comes across in the performances of Gellar, Hannigan, and Brendon. (Carpenter's character is too much of a cliché to be interesting, but that's nothing that couldn't be fixed by a vampiric hickey or two.)

The caffeine-free Head is marvelous as the proper and studious Rupert Giles. His character doesn't seem to fully realize it, but, for perhaps the first time in his life, he has bonded with someone.

He is Buffy's "watcher," but he is also emotionally involved with her and her friends. He has found a family in this small band of monster-bashing outsiders.

Joss Whedon, who wrote the original Buffy the Vampire Slayer theatrical release and who helms the television series, makes no secret of his love for comic books. Neither E.C. nor Marvel Comics fans will find themselves in unfamiliar territory here. The heroes have their human foibles, the villains are larger-than-death, and even the most incredible situations ring true.

Buffy is trapped in this destiny she never made. She wants to lead a normal life, have some laughs, and make the cheerleading squad. She doesn't want to keep the secret of her other life from her mother, but she won't burden her with that terrible knowledge. Except that she looks much better in a mini-skirt, Buffy could be Peter Parker.

The stories are a cross between the black humor of Tales from the Crypt and the rollicking action and characterization of The Amazing Spider-Man. In one episode, Buffy jokingly told Giles that her Spider Sense was tingling. When she saw his puzzled expression, she said in apology, "Sorry, pop-culture reference."

Whedon and his writers obviously pride themselves on the witty dialogue they put into the mouths of their characters.

It's got a comic-book rhythm to it, as in a recent scene where Buffy pulled a miniature crossbow on a eternally teen vampiress.

"Scary," smiled the bloodsucker in Catholic schoolgirl drag. Then she lifted up a pair of automatic weapons and said "Scarier," before she started blasting away at Buffy.

There are other comic-book echoes in Buffy the Vampire Slayer.

I mentioned the villains earlier, as entertaining a rogue's gallery as you'll find anywhere.

There's The Master, lord of all vampires, trapped within the Hell-Mouth until he can find a way to restore his awful power and defeat The Slayer.

There's The Anointed One, the innocent-looking boy who rules at his side. And a few non-vampiric sorts.

My favorite was the demon Moloch, who plotted to take over the world via the Internet. Scarier.

As in the best episodic comic books, the audience gets the feeling that anything can happen in Buffy.

We've seen two recurring characters die unexpectedly. This keeps the tension level high.

Recently, when another recurring character was in jeopardy, I didn't know whether the character would survive. After all, hadn't Principal Flutie ended up as lunch for a pack of teen hyenas?

Each episode of Buffy is preceded by the announcement that some action sequences may be too intense for young children.

There are, indeed, some violent moments. However, Whedon and his crew do a terrific job of letting the viewers imagine the assorted nastiness rather than have their faces shoved into buckets of gore and gristle.

I like their approach, if only because I've yet to see anything on any screen, big or small, as scary as that which I can picture in the theater of my mind.

Buffy airs as part of the WB network. It gets moved around a bit in some areas because of sporting events, but it's well worth a little searching.

There were something like a dozen episodes produced for this first season, and it seems likely that another dozen will be done for a second season.

If you're a teen or an adult looking for something a little kickier than most adventure shows, something with a delicious touch of black humor, then I recommend Buffy. It's horror with a heart.

Actually (he said in his best Giles voice), quite a lot of hearts.

When they speak about "student bodies" at Sunnydale High School, they ain't just whistling the "Monster Mash."

See you next time.

Mass o' Media Extra

★ The Carolco fire sale continues. The Hollywood Reporter confirmed that Miramax's Dimension Films snagged all rights to make Rambo sequels after the studios put up $500,000 at the bankruptcy auction May 13. The Reporter quoted Miramax head Bob Weinstein as saying that property will soon be a big-budget, big-star film, hopefully with original Rambo star Sylvester Stallone attached, something that's pretty likely to happen, since: 1) Stallone stars in Miramax's Cop Land this summer, and 2) Sly's star has been slowly dimming, and darned if those first three Rambo movies didn't make a ton of money worldwide, firmly establishing Stallone as a mega-star in the first place.

Other properties up for sale include a science-fiction thriller called Dead Reckoning; Burning Chrome, the remake rights to the 1960s television series The Invaders; and half-ownership of the potential sequel Terminator 3.

The weird part of the Rambo deal? Miramax owns Dimension, and Disney owns Miramax. Yep, so when the next Rambo movie hits the theaters, it'll be making money for the mouse.

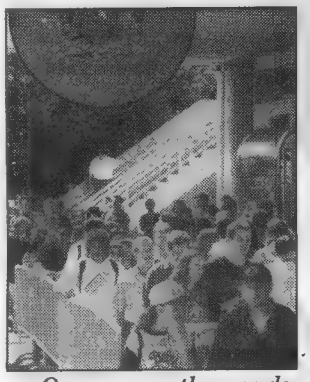
Comic-Con International: San Diego continues to grow



Once a year, thousands of comics buffs throng San Diego.

By David Glanser
Director of Marketing and Public Relations

Over the years Comic-Con International has grown in size and scope to become one of North America's leading conventions. What many people are unaware of is that Comic-Con International is a nonprofit organization run, in large part, by fans dedicated to the comics medium. As we plan our 28th convention our mission statement is a constant source of inspiration and commitment: "Comic-Con International is a nonprofit educational corporation dedicated to creating awareness of and appreciation for comics and related popular art forms, primarily through the presentation of conventions and events that celebrate the historic and ongoing contribution of comics to art and culture."

Our mission solidifies what we feel is the most important aspect of our organization's existence. That aspect, our commitment to the comics art medium, has been with us from the very beginning.

The first gathering of fans that would become Comic-Con occurred in March 1970: A one-day event was held to raise funds for the larger three-day convention to come. In August 1970 Ray Bradbury, Jack Kirby, and A.E. van Vogt joined about 300 people to attend our first multi-day show at the U.S. Grant Hotel in San Diego.

Although paying homage to one's favorite creator at Comic-Con International isn't necessary, it can't hurt.

By August 1971 we welcomed about 800 people to the convention, then held at the University of California San Diego campus. As the years progressed, so did our attendance of fans, professionals, and exhibitors. A decade later, in July 1991, attendance exploded, as more than 25,000 industry professionals and fans joined the festivities at the new downtown San Diego Convention Center. Guests that year included Clive Barker, Neil Gaiman, Dan DeCarlo, Harlan Ellison, Joe Haldeman, Lynn Johnston, Jim Lee, Joe Kubert, Sheldon Moldoff, Rick Sternbach, Don Maitz, Jannie Wurts, Keith Giffen, and Jack Kirby, as well as Dan Castellanata (the voice of Homer Simpson) in Harvey Pekar's stage version of his American Splendor.

In the years since, Comic-Con has come to occupy the convention center's entire 250,000-square-foot exhibit floor as well as its two floors of meeting space. The con boasts an array of panels and seminars on all aspects of comics and related popular arts. Past panels and seminars have been conducted on such topics as Law for Comic-Book Creators, The Aspiring Cartoonist, and How to be a Working Actor in Movies.

Each year we feature previews and panel discussions on upcoming Hollywood movies and the up-to-date information on new comics from the industry's top publishers.

This year our attendees can look forward to such events as:

- Panels of Golden and Silver Age creators including Robert Kanigher and Marie Severin, moderated by Mark Evanier.
- Independent film producer and distributor Phillip Cable conducting panels and workshops on aspects of the movie industry in the con's salute to independent filmmaking.
- Scott Frazier and Fred Patten's panels looking back on 20 years of anime fandom.
- The Cartoon Network's screening of original episodes of Space Ghost and previewing three new series.
- Saturday evening's post-Masquerade party. (This year we've added a Star Wars 20th anniversary party.)

Pros vs. fans: The San Diego Trivia Challenge

By Michael Grabois

Strange things happen late at night at the San Diego Convention Center during Comic-Con International.

On Friday, July 5, last year, one of the events was the Trivia Challenge. The question of the night: How do these people remember all that trivia? "It's not trivia. It's important stuff!" more than one person was heard to say.

Following the Eisner Awards ceremony that night was the Second Annual Pros vs. Fans Trivia Challenge. Due to a scheduling mix-up, the contest wasn't scheduled to start until 10 p.m., but that didn't stop a crowd from showing up to watch The Black Ink Irregulars (Tom Galloway, David Goldfarb, Greg Morrow, Stephen Brumbaugh, and Jim Murdoch, a group of friends from the Internet comics newsgroup) take on The Purple Pros (Roger Stern, Kurt Busiek, Mark Waid, and Len Wein).

At San Diego cons in the past, Galloway and Goldfarb had been kicked off the regular trivia contest for winning too often. So in 1995 they organized a trivia challenge against several pros. The Black Ink Irregulars, as they styled themselves, trounced The Purple Pros in 1995, prompting Wein and Busiek to issue a Silver-Age-only challenge for 1996 (covering the period from Showcase #4 to Amazing Spider-Man #122).

Busiek showed up late at the 1996 Challenge, to thunderous applause; he had just won several Eisners and propped the awards on the Pros table for inspiration. Then the contest started, with Jim Hay as the moderator and Keith DeCandido as his Vanna.

The Irregulars then announced that, in a bid to psych out Mark Waid, they would informally change their name to the Rogues Gallery Revenge Squad. Waid announced that he was shaking. In the audience were such luminaries as CBG columnists Peter David and Craig Shutt; among the props on the table was a towel for the losing team to throw in.

Watching the people in the audience was nearly as much fun as watching the contest: There were cheerleaders, hecklers, videotapers, costumed characters, and other interested observers. Some had personal stakes in the outcome, which was closely watched by at least two audience members who had a bet riding on the contest.

The Pros jumped to an early lead of 100-10 before the Irregulars surged ahead 165-150.

Questions included topics ranging from "What were the properties of silver kryptonite?" to "What does T.H.U.N.D.E.R. stand for?" to "Why did The Teen Titans first meet?" to "What innate power did Herbie Popnecker have?" to "What was the first underground comic book?"

There was good-natured ribbing between the teams, ranging from long-winded fan answers to accusations of bloodthirsty pros.

But the Pros pulled it out at the end, winning 190-160.

An immediate rematch challenge was issued by Irregular MVP Tom Galloway, who answered every question the fan team got right. Roger Stern, the MVP for The Purple Pros, accepted.

The running score is tied at one match apiece. Who knows what will happen this year?

Dick Ayers will be honored at Golden Age dinner

SAN DIEGO COMIC CON INTERNATIONAL

By Michael Naiman

Attending Comic-Con International is an extra treat for collectors, fans, and hobbyists because of the opportunity they get to greet and talk with some of the true pioneers of the comic-book industry.

Thanks to the efforts of the non-profit American Association of Comicbook Collectors, Golden Age greats are showcased every year at a special dinner for members of the association held in San Diego during Comic-Con International. Past honorees have included Irv Novick, Creig Flessel, and Kurt Schaffenberger.

This year's fifth annual national membership meeting will honor Dick Ayers.

In a career spanning more than 50 years in the comics field, Ayers has been responsible for more than 19,000 pages of comic art.

He started in the comic-book field in 1947, when he created Chic 'n' Chu, which never saw print.

From October until December of 1947, he had the opportunity to pencil Joe Shuster's and Jerry Siegel's Funnyman and in 1948 he was assigned his first comic book by Vin Sullivan: Jimmy Durante. In 1949 Sullivan launched The Ghost Rider, which Ayers pencilled, inked, and lettered. Also in 1949, he pencilled his first eight-page detective story for Stan Lee. It wasn't until 1951 that he actually met Lee, when he was assigned the four-page story "Ghouls Rush In" that began a long-lasting and ongoing list of assignments of stories and comic books for the Timely/Atlas/Marvel line.

Some of Ayers' early Marvel work included The Human Torch (1953), Rawhide Kid (1955), and Wyatt Earp (1957). In 1959 Stan teamed the inking of Ayers with the pencilling of Jack Kirby, first working on monster stories and then in 1962 on The Fantastic Four, The Incredible Hulk, and Sgt. Fury.

The latter title was pencilled by Ayers for more than 100 issues. From 1949 to 1997 Ayers worked on more than 10,400 pages for Marvel alone.

The AACC dinner offers many Golden Age giants the rare opportunity to get together with their peers.

At last year's dinner honoring Kurt Schaffenberger, the AACC arranged to surprise Kurt by introducing him for the very first time to Mrs. Jerry Siegel — the real-life model for Lois Lane.

Tentative guests for this year's dinner include Julius Schwartz, Gil Kane, Marie Severin, Gene Colan, Roy Thomas, Shelley Moldoff, Jim Mooney, George Tuska, Win Mortimer, Dick Sprang, and Ramona Fradon.

This year, a special piece of art is being prepared for the dinner and will be offered in an auction at the end of the evening.

More information about the AACC is available from AACC, P.O. Box 151029, San Diego, CA 92175.

Convention attendees who visit Artist's Alley can stop by and chat with Golden Age and Silver Age artists. Because of their foresight, creativity, and efforts, these pioneering men and women of the comic-book industry are among the reasons that comic-book conventions have been a popular success for many years.

A number of costumed characters roam the convention floor throughout Comic-Con International.

Eisner Awards will feature keynote speech by Frank Miller

All convention-goers are invited to attend the Will Eisner Comic Industry Awards ceremony Friday, July 18, at the Hyatt Hotel. Doors will open at 8 p.m., with the festivities beginning at 8:15. Attendees will need convention badges to gain admittance.

The evening will begin with the presentation of Comic-Con's own Inkpot Awards, given for lifetime achievement in comics and related popular arts. Scott Shaw! will once again serve as master of ceremonies. In addition, the Russ Manning Most Promising Newcomer Award and the Bob Clampett Humanitarian Award will be presented.

A brief keynote speech by five-time Eisner winner Frank Miller, writer/artist of such classics as Batman: The Dark Knight Returns and Sin City, will follow.

The remainder of the evening will be devoted to presentation of the Eisner Awards, often called "the Oscars of the comics industry." Celebrity presenters will announce nominees in the more than 25 categories, which range from Best Continuing Series and Best Single Issue to Best Writer and Best Cover Artist. Eisner will be on hand to congratulate the winners as they collect their plaques.

The Eisner Awards are sponsored in part by industry distributors, printers, and retailers. This year's sponsors include Quebecor Printing, Brenner Printing, and Star*Reach.

The nominees are chosen by a five-person panel and are voted on by professionals throughout the comics industry, including creators, publishers, editors, distributors, and retailers.

A celebration party will follow the awards presentation in an adjoining room at the Hyatt.

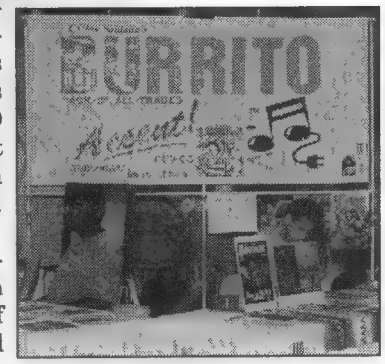
San Diego program book has a new look

This year's Comic-Con Souvenir Book is edited by Slave Labor Graphics Publisher Dan Vado and features, for the first time, multi-page comics stories as well as comic strips. "I'm really very happy and proud to be asked to put this book together," Vado said.

The book offers information on the various themes of this year's convention including: Star Wars' 20th anniversary, a salute to independent filmmaking, and a salute to horror comics with a nod to the 100th anniversary of Bram Stoker's Dracula.

Small press will attend San Diego

Recently, Comic-Con International expanded its mission by presenting the annual Alternative Press Expo in San Jose, Calif. February's show saw a total attendance of 1000 fans, pros, and exhibitors. Next year's Alternative Press Expo is a two-day event scheduled for Feb. 21 and 22, again in San Jose.



This year's Comic-Con International: San Diego also offers its own small-press area, and a number of exhibitors have already reserved space.

This year's small-press coordinator Cary Coatney said, "It's amazing as you look through some of these comics how much heart and soul go into presenting their products."

Coatney added that he has many ideas to improve exposure for the large group of self-published creators at the show. "This year we're planning a convention directory of sorts that will be integrated into the Comic-Con program book. The directory features a listing of the small-press publishers who attend and information on obtaining their products."

Additionally, in an attempt to integrate cultural themes, Coatney said he plans to bring a primary focus to his medley of ideas: He hopes to reintroduce cultures and races through the forum of comic-book reading by paying a salute to such Hispanic creators as Carlos Saldaña of Accent! Comics (Burrito), Jose Martinez of Chico Comics (The Chosen), and Richard Dominguez of Azteca Productions (El Gato Negro), among others. Coatney said, "I'm sure there are some people who have never been exposed to these Hispanic talents. I hope this gives them an opportunity to see some pretty exciting work."

Regarding the small press in general Coatney said, "There is such a smorgasbord of products, from Christian to anthropomorphic, from a twinge of super-hero to mysteries, to some of the best humor comics in the industry, I'd be really surprised if someone were to walk into the small-press area and not buy something."

Some of the small-press creators scheduled to attend include: Steven Oerding, Oliver Simonson, Ronn and Troi Stern, Joe Chiappetta, Mike Manley, Richard Becker, Megan Kelso, John Riley and Garrett Berner, and Jessica Abel.

From 'Supreme' to Extreme: Alan Moore constructs an Awesome universe

Awesome Entertainment INDIES

"I was trying to design, to some degree, my dream mainstream comics universe ..."
— Alan Moore

By Rob Samsel

Alan Moore has been delighting comics readers for a decade and a half, notably with his run on DC's Swamp Thing and The Watchmen*.* Swamp Thing led to a more intellectual approach to American comics and paved the way for DC's Vertigo imprint. On the other hand, The Watchmen gave fans a revisionist look at characters, its impact is being felt in the comics business on a daily basis.

These days, Moore's sensibilities are on display monthly in Supreme*, where he has been developing the character for nearly a year. His exploration of Supreme's past has prompted a look into the past of the entire history of that universe. This exploration will take place in the pages of* Judgment Day*, the upcoming mini-series of which Moore is the chief architect.*

CBG: Judgment Day is a turning point for the Extreme universe. Explain a bit behind the thrust of it.

Alan Moore: I was talking, while doing Supreme, to Extreme Editor Eric Stephenson about how, as it turned out, while telling the back history of Supreme, I was also filling in a lot of back areas of Extreme continuity. I was making them up as I was going along but filling them in, nonetheless. I suggested to Eric that, if Rob Liefeld wanted, I could pretty well overhaul the entire Extreme universe as I was going along.

Rob thought I should condense my ideas into a three-issue mini-series. The mini-series would help create a new Extreme universe by filling in previously unmentioned bits of its history. Rob was stuck on the title Judgment Day, but I wasn't so sure, because it sounded like another apocalyptic story — and, in comic books these days, the apocalypse has become a trifle dull. The end of the world happens every couple of issues in one comic book or another. We decided to see if there were any other connotations we could investigate in terms of a Judgment Day story.

I thought that maybe a court trial might work, as it's a tried and tested vehicle for a story. I thought I could use that device as a framework and that I could come up with a murder case that allowed for evidence to be called for which would fill in, in flashbacks, this panoramic story of the Extreme universe stretching back to the formation of the Earth. And that is basically what we've done. I've finished the story, and we've got it to all fit into the three issues, and we managed to compress this staggering sweep of history into about 96 pages.

CBG: What was your biggest challenge?

Moore: I suppose it was the sheer complexity of trying to imagine a coherent comic-book universe from its place in the present day — and also its history, which can stretch back to the caveman and beyond. I tried to come up with a completely rounded history of the Extreme universe, stretching into all these previously unexplored places, and at the same time creating a universe that had elements of it that are regarded as necessary, things that should be there in comics: the kinds of characters, the range of characters, the range of stories that I think comics ought to be able to represent.

I was trying to design, to some degree, my dream mainstream comics universe, something that was able to contain stories over an incredible range of different genres or situations.

For me the biggest challenge was trying to keep all that straight in my head and to tell Judgment Day as a three-issue mini-series that had a beginning, middle, and end. Also, I had to keep in mind the big picture of this universe and how it would operate, once it was up and running.

Gil Kane's Western art graces the first issue of Judgment Day.

CBG: How has it felt having basically carte blanche to create your own comic-book universe?

Moore: It's been a lot of fun! It's always something that I used to fancy doing back in my mainstream days at DC, but back then I never got the opportunity, because there was a universe in place already.

This is the first chance I've had to do it, and it's been great to see these characters realized. First, the initial sketches by Rick Veitch, because he designed a lot of them, were all wonderful little character designs. They look totally archetypal yet are completely new. They're sort of recognizable, but you've never seen them, which is a great quality.

Also seeing some of the artwork come in, which are some wonderful treats. For example, we've created a slew of Western characters as part of Judgment Day. The section in the first issue pertaining to those characters — Kid Thunder, The Brimstone Kid, and an Indian sorcerer called Night Eagle — were drawn by Gil Kane. I didn't realize until I got the artwork back that he'd be doing it, and I have to say after seeing it that it's the best artwork I've seen Gil Kane do in years — and that's coming from a big Gil Kane fan. It's perfect! It looks like he had a ball doing it, and it's just brilliant stuff.

These two or three pages of Gil Kane are going to be worth the price of admission alone, as far as I'm concerned. It's been fun watching these characters materialize. There's been a great deal of pleasure being able to repopulate a comics landscape that for the past 15 years or so has been stripped down to nothing but super-heroes. What will come of it, I don't know, but the early response has been warm, and I've had a lot of fun doing it.

CBG: The mini-series itself has a variety of top-flight talent work- ing on it. Would you rather have had one artist in order to maintain a consistent style of storytelling?

Moore: No, I don't think so. I think it was me who suggested getting different artists in to handle these different flashbacks and inset periods. The thing is: If we've got one artist doing the whole of Judgment Day, he either has to be a very, very, versatile artist or you wouldn't be able to get the kind of difference in styles that evokes these different types of comics.

For example, in the first issue, there's a Western sequence drawn by Gil Kane, there's an excellent looking barbarian sequence drawn by Chris Sprouse, and Adam Pollina's done this wonderful little jungle man two-page sequence. All of these artists bring a certain style to the genre, and they've been chosen because they can do it very well. It will make these flashback characters seem more real — giving them a sort of history and a visual identity, as if they were characters that had a long published history.

We've gotten Todd Klein to do a lot of really neat logos for the characters.

It's just all part of creating the illusion of this sprawling back history of characters. I think the result will be better than it would have been if it had been done by just one artist, because it has been planned to be worked on by a number of hands. Rob Liefeld will provide the frame and the background for the story by handling all the courtroom and present-day sequences.

Rick Veitch provided designs for many of the characters in Judgment Day including Mark Time (above) and a member of the Storm Birds (below).

Rob Liefeld passes 'Judgment' on his own universe

By Rob Samsel

After working for more than a year with Marvel Comics on its "Heroes Reborn" project Rob Liefeld has gone back to work on his own stable of characters. With the Judgment Day mini-series, Liefeld gets back to those characters in a big way — not only working with Alan Moore, but also launching it as the first project under his new Awesome imprint, which he co-founded with Jeph Loeb and Scott Rosenberg.

CBG: What's it like having Alan Moore revamp your entire universe?*

Rob Liefeld: It's going great, actually. He's full of such cool ideas and he's always sending us great stuff. Everyone's having a good time, seeing what he comes up with next. Some of the revamps he's done are really great — so great, in fact, that we've got to get together really super teams to be able to pull off his vision. I've never seen him this enthusiastic; he's just burning up the fax machine with new ideas.

CBG: After more than a year of dealing with another company's characters, is it nice to be back working on your own again?*

Liefeld: Going to work on the "Heroes Reborn" stuff was a kick, but you don't know how much you're going to miss your own stuff until you go back to doing it. It made me say, "Wow, I've been neglecting my kids and I've been a bad parent." [Laughter]

I've said it before: Going back to Marvel was boot camp. When we went back to Marvel, I heard it was for all kinds of reasons, from money to whatever. For me, though, I was lost and hadn't made a deadline in a long time, and I knew that this project would make me challenge myself and that I would have to get my act together again.

A lot of people told me when the deal with Marvel was going south that I'd had my time with these characters — and to just let it go and get back to my own characters. Judgment Day was coming up, and people suggested I throw myself into that project full steam. So far, it's been a really great experience. The other day, I was dropping off pages to my inker Jon Sibal and said, "Isn't it cool working on Shaft, Die-Hard, and all these other characters we haven't visited in a long time?"

It was a matter of going back to the characters after six months instead of after 12. It's just business. I was terrified that I wouldn't be able to do my own six-issue arc, ending with the Cable appearance. Once I did those, I felt my original commitment as laid out to the fans — that I would do six issues — was adhered to.

I feel sorry for the guys who had to work on those other issues who won't have their stuff published now. The Stephen Platt stuff on Cap was the most gorgeous he's ever done, and I'm sorry for him that the fans won't get to see it. We offered the story to Marvel and were told, "No, thanks." Marvel just felt some absurd need to turn its back on the most successful thing it had had in years.

CBG: Will the advent of Awesome Entertainment have any bearing on the post-Judgment Day Extreme universe?*

Liefeld: Every year we do a crossover at Extreme, and, this year (given our separation from Image Comics), I didn't just want to do another crossover.

We approached Alan, and the result was Judgment Day. The thought was that Judgment Day was going to be the door that leads the fans into the new company. When Judgment Day is done, Alan will have built a new foundation that will serve as the platform for everything we'll be doing at Awesome.

CBG: What comics do you think will come out of the aftermath of Judgment Day?*

Liefeld: Right now, Alan has written the first 24-issue outline of a new Youngblood series that will probably not be called Youngblood.

Then, he's done the same thing for Glory, The Newmen, and a series called The Allies. These treatments he's written are just the coolest things to read; his Youngblood, for example, is just awesome! All of the things that he's done are terrific, and we're putting together the teams we feel will work best on each of these series.

We certainly don't want to rush these things out. We want to do a small line of comics with Awesome, whereas at Extreme we were doing 25 titles at one point. I want to get established names working on these comics — with very high production values — and just do a little line of really good comic books.

The marketplace doesn't want a big line of comics and it will reject them.

CBG: Where does this leave you personally, now that you've been able to stay on your post-"Heroes Reborn" roll?*

Liefeld: Right now I'm considering one of the Alan Moore projects, because it really gets my creative juices going; but I'm not going to say which one right now.

I keep telling myself that I'm going to do something new, but I really want to do my own characters again. Creatively, it will be a gas, and it's got lots of fun and great ideas behind it. I read the concepts and the breakdowns by Alan and say to myself, "These are the kind of comics I liked as a kid; I think I should give one a shot."

What "Heroes Reborn" taught me was that, if you're not going to be monthly, don't expect to get any results. The kids want you monthly and on a regular basis. I think it was something I definitely got away from while I was at Image. I feel as though I'd be a fool if I didn't jump right back in there. There's a lot of guys in this business who want to use comics as a stepping stone to do movies and cartoons, and, oddly enough, I've been accused of that.

I continue to draw comics because I love comics, not because I have to draw comics. I love the medium and I love drawing pictures, and I think I'm supposed to do that, not make movies or cartoons. I look at Judgment Day, and it's just gorgeous! The Adam Pollina pages, the Ian Churchill pages, the Dan Jurgens pages, these awesome Gil Kane pages, the Steve Skroce stuff, the Chris Sprouse pages: It's all just fantastic!

It's Awesome's initial launch title, and I think it will really set the tone for the company. It's the greatest writer in comics' history put together with the best team of artists available. It means a lot for the company and a lot for the characters, as well. I'm just really excited about Judgment Day and what it means for the company throughout the summer.

"What 'Heroes Reborn' taught me was that, if you're not going to be monthly, don't expect to get any results."
— Rob Liefeld

Lightning's 'Sinthia' comes to comics and toys

Lightning Comics INDIES

The August release of Lightning's Sinthia #1 (above) coincides with the Skybolt Toyz release of both its deluxe (right, reversed) and regular (below) Sinthia action figures.

Lightning Comics and its toy manufacturing arm, Skybolt Toyz, have announced plans for a joint August release of the comic book Sinthia and the "comics-store exclusive" Sinthia action figure. Lightning's Steven Zyskowski said, "It's the first time ever a new comic book has been offered through the direct market side by side with a new action figure based on the leading character."

Sinthia #1 will feature color artwork by Brazilian Rod Perry. Sinthia is created and written by Hellina creator Joseph Adam.

Adam said of his latest creation, "Sinthia is Lucifer's daughter, and she doesn't want anything to do with him or Hell. In the first issue, Sinthia and her guardian, Mhor-Duke, secretly leave Hell to go to Earth because she wants to experience the forbidden emotion of love."

Zyskowski added, "Sinthia is one of the coolest scripts I've ever read. We love the character and are excited about offering a highly detailed action figure of Sinthia at the same time as her comic-book launch. We know it's a bold step, but we're confident comics retailers, comic-book collectors, and action-figure collectors will all come together to support this event."

Four cover versions of Sinthia #1 are available: #1A and #1B have different cover art and retail for $3 each; a "platinum" commemorative edition limited to 5000 copies retails for $9.95; and a special autographed edition of Sinthia #1, signed by Adam with a numbered certificate of authenticity, also retails for $9.95.

Lightning will not offer nude editions of Sinthia, and Zyskowski added that the comic book is intended for all reading audiences.

The Sinthia action figure retails for $10.95 and is available both individually and in cases of six figures (containing five regular figures and one chase figure per case). A Sinthia "platinum" collectors' edition action figure is also available for $14.95, limited in production to 5000 units.

For every 25 copies retailers order of Sinthia #1 (in any combination of cover versions), they will receive a free "Deluxe Sinthia" action figure, featuring a combination of silver and gold metallic paints.

Zyskowski said, "The 'Deluxe Sinthia' action figure is a major part of the Sinthia comic-book promotion.

"We want to encourage sales of the comic book. By giving this 'Deluxe Sinthia' figure to retailers, it'll help their bottom line and help us build an audience for Sinthia."

Skybolt's Hellina figure is ready to ship in June

Nira X is next action figure from new toy manufacturer

Skybolt Toyz has reported high orders for its Hellina action figure scheduled to ship exclusively to the direct market in June.

Skybolt Vice President of Marketing Steven Zyskowski said, "When retailers initially placed their advance orders through Diamond for the Hellina figure, most of them had only seen our first prototype, which, truthfully, wasn't that impressive. On the positive side, the final Hellina action figure is drawing rave reviews from industry professionals and collectors alike. Collecting Figures (May 1997) actually said the Hellina figure could be one of the top female action figures for 1997. That's pretty encouraging. We're glad comics retailers and collectors ordered the Hellina figure with such confidence and would like to extend our sincerest appreciation to them. The action-figure community has also been very supportive of Skybolt."

The Hellina figures will ship in cases of six containing five regular figures and one "mystery" chase figure per case, individually, and as a "platinum" collectors' edition.

Zyskowski said, "We want to give retailers all the tools they need to sell this figure. The actual size of the Hellina blister card is 9" x 13". It's guaranteed to draw a lot of attention to it. Also, the graphics on the card are absolutely stunning, and, of course, so is the Hellina figure."

Skybolt's next action figure will be based on Bill Maus' Nira X: Cyber-Angel, solicited to ship in July.

Maus said, "The quality of the finished Hellina prototype convinced me that Skybolt is committed to a quality product. As a toy collector myself, I know what I want to see out of an action figure and I know you'll be impressed with the Nira X. She's hot."

Swiping at institutions

Aardwolf anthology features Colan art

"Gene Colan is one of the most dramatic and sensitive artists I've ever come across."
— Clifford Meth

By Patrick Daniel O'Neill

"It was either call it that or Adrenaline, Testosterone, and a Little Marijuana," joked author Clifford Meth of his anthology collection Perverts, Pedophiles & Other Theologians from Aardwolf Publishing. "These short stories and prose poems — illustrated by Gene Colan — include some hard science fiction as well as some introspective stuff: the kind of thing the Beat Generation popularized, personal, plotless, a style I sometimes like to assume. Of course, you can't do too many of those in this kind of volume because they're difficult to illustrate."

The volume also features a foreword by Steve Gerber and a computer-painted cover by Jeff Amano.

The title suggests a theme of sorts, but Meth said it actually reflected his world view more than any theme.

"I went to rabbinical college," he said. "I won't call myself a Bible scholar, but I'm probably better versed than the average Joe. In that world (and among the ultra-religious in general), I've encountered a lot of strange things, a lot of very bad people.

"I've been involved with several child abuse cases. Now, at the ripe old age of 36, these things have started to gel in my mind. I've realized that there are a lot of wrongs that can't be opiated by religion, that have to be dealt with head-on."

Meth added that he has strong feelings about those who use religion to cloak immoral behavior.

"The book's title is a swipe at the assumed holiness of institutions and the people who hide behind these masks," he said. "I do write about that in certain stories, like 'Bruises,' which first appeared in Crawling from the Wreckage, the volume Aardwolf did to raise money for child-abuse prevention agencies.

"I also did a story a few years ago about child abuse in the Lubavitcher organization, a spin on a case I had testified in. It cost me a year of my life. It left an indelible impression. So I don't have to search far for material: These things have smeared themselves on my life."

Choosing Gene Colan to illustrate the volume was due to Meth's personal admiration. "Gene Colan is one of the most dramatic and sensitive artists I've ever come across. I realize there's a new-fangled way of doing things in the comics industry, but Gene transcends that and he's maintained his popularity because of that. Gene illustrated some of my stories in the past; this was an opportunity to get him on a whole volume. Gene was pretty busy, especially now that he's returned to Daredevil, but I guess you could say he likes me."

Likes is an understatement, Colan said. "Cliff's writing is beautiful. I love his stuff. He sent me some stories to look over, and one was a poem about Daredevil that was really lovely — I'd never seen anything like it. This kind of stuff appeals to me, and his writing is sensational."

Colan added that his approach to prose illustration is not too different from his approach to comics. "When illustrating a prose story, I single out a part of the story that I'd like to see as a picture. It's like going to the movies: Comics are a form of continuity drawing, something that almost moves. An illo in this case is a single frame from the film. I pick the part of the story that allows me to emulate the style of movie I grew up on — film noir."

Gerber said he admires Colan as much as Meth does. "I want to praise Gene to the heavens. The strength of his work is its humanity. I could talk about the technical aspects, the way he plays with light and shadow, the unusual angles and perspectives, but none of that is really as important as the fact that the characters he draws look human."

Jeff Amano said he considers the veteran artist his mentor. For the cover of Perverts, Pedophiles & Other Theologians, Amano worked over a pencil illustration by Colan. "I scan the pencils into the computer. I do a color guide in my head and use the pencils as a bottom layer in Photoshop. Then I use a pressure-sensitive pen and start painting. It's painted, not colored, because I'm using the pencils as a guide, not just filling them in with color. I was an airbrush illustrator and oil painter and strive to match those techniques on the computer."

Meth said he hopes that Colan, Gerber, and Amano will bring a certain readership to Perverts, Pedophiles & Other Theologians. "There's an older reader out there, too, and the kind of stuff I read is what I like to write. The types of stories that Alan Moore and Neil Gaiman do when they're writing prose still attracts older comics readers, even when it's not illustrated, because they've attached themselves to the comics industry.

"I've had success through comics shops and maybe 80% of the people who read me came to me through the comics market. 10-year-old readers won't follow Gene Colan. Those kids probably won't get it; but 15, 16-year-olds: I was reading Harlan Ellison at 13 and I got it. You can write for a heady audience and still get a heady teenager to understand you."

Meth, who is (with Dave Cockrum) a principal owner of Aardwolf, added that he has strong hopes for the company and its place in the direct market. "I think Aardwolf will weather the current storm in the industry and maintain a presence. We have lots of projects in the works involving some of the better writers and artists. We'll continue to do trade paperbacks and the occasional comic book. Our stuff is for the reader who likes comic books and also wants something a little deeper sometimes."

Perverts, Pedophiles & Other Theologians ($9.95) is scheduled to ship in May and can be ordered directly from the publisher at 45 Park Pl. S., Suite 270, Morristown, NJ 07960.

The Sleeping Giant wakes

'Death by Chocolate' and 'Threshold' are David Yurkovich's dreams

Sleeping Giant INDIES

By Steve Ginsberg

Known to some as the king of quirky super-hero comics, David Yurkovich (of Sleeping Giant Comics) will continue his Death by Chocolate series with Sir Geoffrey and the Chocolate Car.

"I've managed to do a little bit of everything in this tale: science fiction, historical fiction, animal antics, detective fiction, and unexplained phenomena," said Yurkovich recently.

Sleeping Giant titles are filled with content, rich with story and complex characters. "I've done as much as possible to play on phrases and words and still keep an underlying story that is effectively moving. I think also that this story is the most accessible one I've written that'll hold the interests of both young and older readers," Yurkovich continued.

"No matter what you do, someone will find it entertaining."
— David Yurkovich

Sir Geoffrey, scheduled to ship in July, is the story of Geoff, a canine from an alternate reality who is exiled to Earth and decides he wants to become the next Ernest Hemingway. Armed with a device that enables him to move through time and space, he winds up in Ketchum, Idaho, in 1961, just prior to Hemingway's suicide.

Meanwhile, Geoff is being pursued by a mysterious trio known as Tmastro, who desperately want Geoff's space-time device. He is briefly comforted in his travails by recounting his personal story with Death by Chocolate protagonists Agents Swete (the Chocolate Man) and Anderson, who wind up in the past with Geoff.

Although Yurkovich said he enjoys working on the Death by Chocolate series, it is his other title, Threshold, that he said he has more fun with — since he's dealing with a much larger cast of characters.

"I planned this series for a long time and wanted to make certain of one thing: I did not want Threshold to be another series about heroes in tights. Anything but that."

Being a self-publisher also allows Yurkovich the opportunity to experiment, and he said he is expanding his storytelling style to take full advantage of the black-and-white medium in which he publishes. "Life doesn't begin and end with india ink, and I'm incorporating graytones into every page of the story using markers, colored pencil, and wash. I'm printing the issue on gloss stock with a 133-line screen, and this ought to capture the detail in the art quite effectively."

A CHOCOLATE CAR?
YES. A 1937 CORD 812 SC PHAETON TO BE SPECIFIC. THE DETAIL IS INCREDIBLE, TOO PRECISE TO HAVE BEEN MADE FROM MOLDS.
I SEE. SO YOU BELIEVE AGENT SWETE MAY HAVE HAD A "HAND" IN ITS CONCEPTION.
YES.

Yurkovich's work includes the upcoming Sir Geoffrey and the Chocolate Car (right) and Threshold: The Stamp Collector (below).

There are many factors to consider when bringing a comic book to the marketplace, and Yurkovich said he has considered them all. "I was, and still am, concerned that the obscurity of the title might throw some people. But the name stuck and actually adds to the overall theme of the series, which is that Threshold doesn't fit in. They're the round pegs on a board full of squares.

"They've got a really non-dramatic team name, the members are not at all concerned with their super-hero image, their clothes aren't skin-tight, and they manage to avoid action and adventure whenever possible, opting instead for a midnight snack or a classic TV movie."

In the tiny comics universe Yurkovich is creating, there are super-hero teams unique to each major city. These teams are like unionized syndicates, and nearly every city has gone with one of the teams owned and operated by a firm known as The Establishment.

Philadelphia, on the other hand, has contracted with Threshold, a team of individuals not part of The Establishment's "employee pool."

Despite David's disclaimer, there is some action in his book, albeit in a Dali-esque fashion. It is the characters, however, that drive the story and represent the two major themes which predominate. The themes — which ran through his two mini-series and will continue in the ongoing series beginning in October — are, Yurkovich said, "... the juxtaposition between the super-fantastic and the mundane, and the fact that stories can exist without gratuitous cleavage and ultra-violence.

"There's a strong emphasis on character development and humor in Threshold, but not to the extent that the humor overpowers the central story. I think if I had to draw 32 pages of gritted, grinding teeth I'd put a bullet through my head."

Yurkovich added that he's working in a field he has been loved since his youth.

"I began collecting comics in 1977 and was more or less a Marvelite. It was a great time to be collecting comics, because there were a lot of outstanding talents like Kirby, Colan, Claremont, Byrne, Austin, Pérez, Romita Jr., Golden, and Miller contributing regularly to the bullpen.

"It was also a much simpler time to collect and to be a fan. If I were a 13-year-old today, I'd probably avoid comics altogether, since the amount of product available is simply staggering (not to mention the financial costs involved in acquiring these products).

"I'd always wanted to work in comics since that time but remained content as a mild letterhack."

In the late '80s Yurkovich created Threshold. He worked up story outlines for the first eight issues but didn't take it much further than that.

"My technical abilities as an artist were quite limited at that time, and, although I drew about a dozen pages, I quickly developed artists' block and put Threshold into the 'could have done this if I wanted to' pile along with other projects that were never developed beyond the pencil stages."

Yurkovich then drew and inked a five-page story called "The Secret Origin of the Chocolatier," an abbreviated version of what would later become Death by Chocolate.

At the time Yurkovich said he began to think of self-publishing, he called Maria Lapham to track down a missing issue of Stray Bullets and asked if she had any wisdom she could impart on self-publishing. "Maria was very kind and shared this information and also suggested I contact Peter Laird's Xeric Foundation (a non-profit organization which offers financial aid to self-publishers)," Yurkovich said. "I was unfamiliar with Xeric and was a bit skeptical, but things just fell into place and, before I knew it was happening, I'd been awarded financial support from them."

Not only did the grant garner attention for Death by Chocolate that it might not otherwise have received, it also gave Yurkovich the confidence to take another look at Threshold.

Following the two-issue Threshold story, Yurkovich published the Death by Chocolate: The Metabolaters one-shot last November. This added closure to his earlier Death by Chocolate story and leads into the upcoming Sir Geoffrey and the Chocolate Car.

As a self-publisher, Yurkovich shared his opinions. "No matter what you do, someone will find it entertaining. The fact that 'Bad Girl' comics continue to sell is a sign that a group of fans find these stories entertaining. I'm working at providing readers and fans entertainment of a different sort and I put as much story into an issue as will fit.

"I'm not a big fan of the splash page or two- and three-panel pages. I think an artist of high caliber, like Barry Windsor Smith, should do just a few panels on a page, because his art is gorgeous, but I think that, by and large, a lot of comics artists don't understand the art of sequential storytelling.

"I'm sometimes criticized for doing eight- and nine-panel grids, but, really, they're a lot more challenging than doing a few panels on a page.

"I work up several rough breakdowns of every page prior to lightboxing onto Bristol board. I'm very much my own worst critic in that regard. I also read my scripts aloud and, if the dialogue doesn't sound right, I make what I feel to be the necessary alterations."

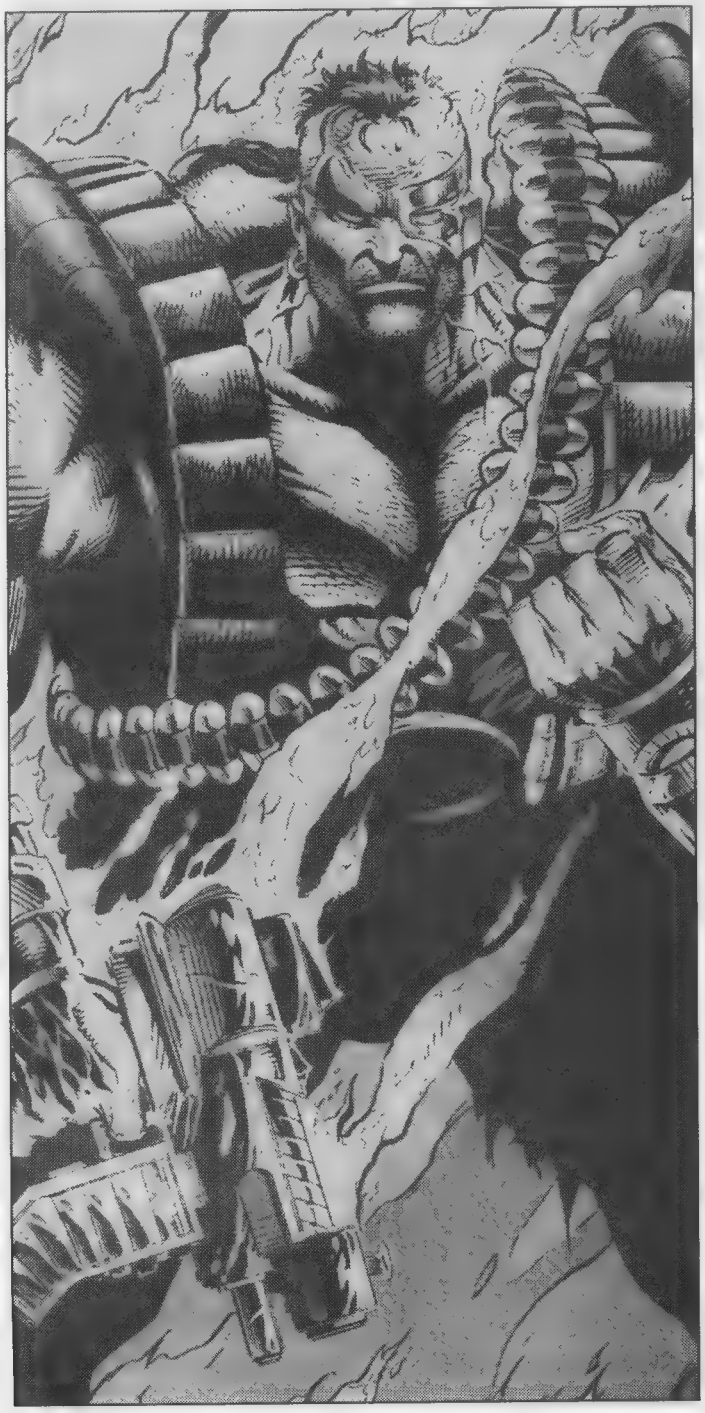
'The Man Called A-X' knows

"Even before A-X had an identity of his own, it had to be determined whether his name was available."
— William Maguire

By William E. Maguire

The Man Called A-X, while having the distinction of being one of the world's strongest super-human comic-book characters, is powerless by himself against infringers on his copyright. In spite of his many years of battle, multiple traumatic injuries, and reconstructive surgeries, A-X is protected because his creators knew he needed trademark and copyright protection. Here are several strategies for protection against potential infringers.

Clearance — Even before A-X had an identity of his own, it had to be determined whether his name was available. The first step in this regard is to perform a screen search with an on-line service such as Trademarkscan or CompuMark On-Line.



In the case of A-X, who has his own titled comic-book series, a search of the federal register for The Man Called A-X in International Class #16 would be necessary. In addition, because A-X is a titled character, other merchandisable classes should also be screened, including, but not limited to, Classes #9, 24, 25, and 28. If the screen search reveals no obvious conflicts, then the next step is to order a full search from any one of several trademark research companies, such as Corsearch and Thomson & Thomson. This full search can search several classes. If the full search indicates that the mark searched for still appears to be clear of any potential conflicts, then it is reasonable to move to the next step.

Trademark Registration — Because A-X will first be marketed in the United States, it is best to seek registration with the Patent and Trademark Office of the federal government. Since A-X is primarily and foremost a comic-book character with his own titled comic-book series, the first trademark application will be in Class #16, which includes such items as comic books, trading cards, posters, printed milk caps, and other printed matter. Among the other classes to consider are the following:

- Class #9 for video tapes, CD-ROMs, and discs featuring music, action-adventure, and animation; prerecorded audio tapes, compact discs, vinyl records; computer software, videogame programs (including downloadable software from a global computer network); and sunglasses.
- Class #24 for bed linens, bath linens, bedsheets, bedspreads, blankets, mattress covers, curtains, draperies, bath mats, pillow shams, towels.
- Class #25 for clothing: T-shirts, shirts, shorts, socks, sweatshirts, ties, caps, and jackets.
- Class #28 for toys, games, and playthings including: action figures, toy vehicles, arcade games, handheld units for playing electronic games, dolls, puppets, stuffed, and plush toys. (Video games are no longer classified in Class #28, but are now in Class #9.)

The next decision to be made after selecting the appropriate classes in which to file is the type of mark to be applied for, i.e., typed and/or stylized format.

The typed format, for the drawing page to be included with the application, provides the broadest protection, since the registration issued allows the holder to use the mark in any style or font. The stylized drawing is in logo format, and the user is limited to protection in this design format only. A-X has protection in the broader category, since he is registered in typed format. Note that using the hyphen (-) symbol between A and X permits the application and drawing page to be filed in typed format, whereas the Trademark Office would only permit the filing of a stylized drawing if a raised bullet or period had been used between the A and X.

Other applications for super-hero comic-book characters such as A-X should also be considered, since the potential for merchandising these types of characters are considerable. Therefore, intent-to-use applications (ITU) in Classes #9, 16, 24, 25, and 28 are among additional classes to be considered. ITU applications would have to be filed if there was no use in interstate or foreign commerce to support a use-based trademark application.

In the case of A-X, not long after the preparation of the ITU application in Class #16, the first issue of The Man Called A-X was shipped and sold in interstate commerce. Soon thereafter, a Statement of Use was filed with the Trademark Office with a Certificate of Registration issued several months later. Once the registration was issued, A-X was also able to use the official trademark registration notice after his name: The Man Called A-X®. Prior to registration, only the symbol ™ should be used.

Had A-X been infringed prior to the date of his federal registration, then A-X could have sought recovery in Federal Court under S 43 (a) of the Lanham Act (15 U.S.C. S 1125 (a)), which prohibits acts of false designation of origin. In addition, there are state law theories available in state courts for dilution, state or common law trademark infringement, and idea misappropriation in some jurisdictions.

Copyright — Another strategy for protecting the comic-book character A-X is copyright law. Under the U.S. Copyright Statute (17 U.S.C. 101 et seq.), works of visual art are protectable from the moment of their inception in any tangible medium.

This means that the visual or graphic depiction of A-X is protectable, even without registration with the Copyright Office in Washington, D.C. In the case of A-X, the recommended method would be to register A-X by preparing Form VA for comic books (for both the art and the text) with separate copyright registrations for A-X posters and trading cards also considered. Copyright does not protect the title or the name A-X but, rather (in this particular case), the art and/or text.

Enforceability will depend upon the extent to which a company or individual creator invests in and follows through on the above strategies. Trademark would seem to be the most prevalent and important strategy in connection with the comic-book industry.

Copyright protection and registration is also important, yet the issue of "substantial similarity" has not seen as much play in this arena. In fact, there are several notable artists who, in some circumstances, have paid "tribute" to other artists by copying their style and poses. Such instances usually go unresolved, with litigation being the only way to determine actual infringement. In any case, such common features as rippling muscles, body suits, capes, and hair styles are not in and of themselves protectable under copyright law.

Recognizing that a comic-book character has tremendous ancillary potential in terms of merchandising is paramount. The comic book itself is just the beginning of what fruit such a character may bear. This being the case, trademark and copyright lawyers must be ready to advise their clients as to what steps are necessary to protect characters. While not intended to be all-inclusive (and with A-X retaining several strategies up his body-armored sleeves, including the trademark registration of his "likeness") this article has attempted to demystify several strategies for protecting comic-book characters.

Now, when The Man Called A-X returns in a DC Comics mini-series later this year, he'll be ready for all potential infringers.

Comic Enthusiasts,

Harris Comics had been part of New York's Big Apple Con since its birth, and have enjoyed the show each of the three times we have been present. The success of the show is due to the capacity attendance that shows up to meet the talants that are invited to the show. The overwhelming fan support has really made the show worthwhile, especially the enthusiasm they bring with them. Unlike most shows that really lack character, the Big Apple Con has made a distinct impression on all that attend, publisher, dealers and fans, due to the unique environment of St. Paul's Church where the event is held. Often called the "Church Show", it has successfully attracted the likes of Chaos, Wizard, Sirius, Crusade, and of course Harris Comics as well as stars such as Glen Danzig. With the lack of a truly mega-New York show, this town needs the Big Apple show for fans to feel like they're part of this wacky industry.

Dear Mike,

Hey, I just wanted to drop you a quick note to thank you for all your help with our appearance at the Big Apple Comic Con. I look forward to bringing Wizard Press to your upcoming shows in the city. Each of your events has been bigger and better than the preceding one and I would gladly urge other companies to come down from their ivory towers to interact face to face with the real consumers and dealers at your shows. You guys proved that by efficiently combining our energies, we can go a very long way toward positively reinforcing greater interest in comics. Don't stop!

Stay in touch!

Sincerely,

BIG APPLES —

THANKS FOR HAVING ME AS A GUEST AT YOUR MAY 3RD, 1997 COMIC CON. I HAD A WONDERFUL TIME AND SOLD MORE PRODUCT THAN EXPECTED (AND I'M ALWAYS OPEN FOR THAT TYPE OF SURPRISE!) YOUR STAFF WAS VERY FRIENDLY AND MORE THAN HELPFUL. YOURS WAS MY FIRST NYC SHOW AND APR. — I LOOK FORWARD TO WORKING WITH YOU AGAIN IN THE FUTURE.

Chaos! Comics would like to thank you and the staff at the Big Apple Con, especially Ceil, for making our long awaited New York appearance a great success. The entire event ran smoothly and the professionalism and organization of your staff was visible throughout the whole day. I'm certain the strong advertising for the show added to the tremendous number of Chaos! Fiends and comic book fans that attended the Big Apple Con to experience Chaos! first hand. We also appreciate all of your efforts in organizing our massive line -- the extra security was a great help! Your motivation and enthusiasm for our industry is sure to make the Big Apple Con a continuing success. I look forward to working with you again soon.

Sincerely,

• Pulp Fiction #1 (Spring 97, $2.50) is out from A List Comics (a division of United Players). The only current names listed in connection with the project are those of Lee Caplin and Publisher Steve Schanes — and there is no information anywhere in the product itself that what it consists of is reprints of material that is decades old.

In fact, the material is especially tantalizing in that regard. Creators listed in the table of contents are Will Eisner, Jack Kirby, Arthur Wallace, Rod Roche, and Brenda Starr. (Yep.) And that's as detailed as the information gets. The panel reproduced below is, according to the credits, by Jack Kirby — and it may be. Just as "The Hawk" is listed as "Willis Rensie" (Eisner, if you take it backward, of course) — and, yes, Hawks of the Sea was conceived and drawn by Eisner. But there are other hands involved, and for creaky old-timers things get tantalizing, when "Rod Roche" looks like Alex Blum, for example. More information, more context, more explanations of pulp fiction which is used between comics fiction: It would help. Where did it come from? When? Some is from Jumbo Comics, but only a caption from "Ginger Snap" by Bob Kane gives a clue. That aside, it's a valuable sampler, especially for those who occasionally hallucinate that everything from the Golden Age was golden. This is a fascinating blend of rough art and fast (sometimes inexplicable) storytelling. Where else will you find this sort of wild thing for only $2.50?

For fans of vintage over-the-top storytelling by creators still learning their craft. B-

• An earlier review griped about a slow start to DC's Supergirl ($1.95). Series writer Peter David provided #8 (Apr 97) and #9 (May 97) — both pencilled by Gary Frank and inked by Cam Smith. And his story has picked up steam to the point at which it is now absolutely barrelling along.

YOU'RE HIS HARBINGER HIS MESSENGER
WELL, NOW YOU'RE GOING TO BRING A MESSAGE BACK TO HIM
AND YOU WON'T HAVE TO MEMORIZE IT, YOU CREEPING SACK OF SLIME..

Supergirl, mind you, is not the Silver Age cousin of Superman. And her relationship to this Mr. and Mrs. Danvers is far more complex than that of the Silver Age Supergirl's was. For a time, it seemed as though today's Supergirl was so grim and gritty (hey, you hang out with demons, that can be an occupational problem) that her title was a downer. With #8, however, Supergirl confronts a blind date, a "misery date" with a "young man" who turns out to be the demonic Buzz.

In a delightfully painful sequence, David explores the intricacies of a hostile "date" among those who set it up. And he draws parallels involving limitations of a physically powerful being trying to live a "normal" life among "normal" people, while confronting viciousness that may at any moment destroy the innocent bystanders. "I should pulp you here and now." "Have fun explaining my mushed remains." And David mixes this with self-referencing involving story plotting and even some theological questions. "God did give you all free will. Boneheaded move, that." In fact, the resolution of the story, in #9, involves Doing the Right Thing. Oh, and it's funny, too. If David keeps up this pace (and improvement), this is going to be a must-buy — and one of the most talked-about series in the field. A-

• Sabrina the Teenage Witch #3 (Jul 97, Archie, $1.50) concludes "The Cleopatra Chronicles," a three-part adventure in which Sabrina has to contend with the Queen of the Nile. The first page is a model of how to bring readers up to date in an ongoing story, and the remainder of the issue, scripted by Parent and Golliher and drawn by Dan DeCarlo, provides a coherent, clever wrap-up of the dilemma of how to get Cleopatra and Marc Antony out of Sabrina's school and back to Egypt. Time travel, witchcraft, a game show, and personal squabbles blend for lightweight fun. It's not clear why Zelda says that, historically, Antony "ends up dying in a sea battle." According to Plutarch (the generally accepted source), Antony killed himself and went to be with Cleopatra as he died. But curious readers may, indeed, find themselves looking up this sort of thing. The Archie version is a nice blend of the TV show and the Archie touch which should entertain fans of the show. B

Lucky shot! He'd winged his man. Hounded and wounded, the most dangerous brigand on the planet was limping to his lair for one last stand.

• Evaluating Dark Horse Presents (which is now up to #120, Apr 97, black and white, $2.95) is tricky, because the contents vary widely from issue to issue. An incredible variety of material has appeared therein, from Concrete to Duckman, from Flaming Carrot to Mr. Monster, from Hellboy to Too Much Coffee Man, from Martha Washington to — You get the idea.

In a complete collection of the 11 years of the anthology title, you are guaranteed to dislike some of the material; you are also guaranteed to find something you'll like. Fans of Al Williamson (collected ever since his E.C. work captivated readers) and Mark Schultz (best known for his Xenozoic Tales) will find in this issue "One Last Job" (written by Schultz and drawn by Williamson). It's a tidy, self-contained short short, only four pages long. Which leaves three serials in various stages of completion, an editorial in which Bob Schreck says goodbye, and a closing one-pager saying much the same thing (with script assist by Jamie S. Rich and art by Casey Jones and Monty Sheldon). Talents on display in the serials include Peter Snejbjerg and Evan Dorkin.

There's no letter grade on this, because each item varies and few are complete. But collectors who want an ongoing collection of what's what in today's comics should try a year's worth of DHP. It's varied and rich.

• Readers who can't come to terms with a Superman whose eyes light up and who needs containment in a capeless blue energy suit can rest assured that DC still has the kind of stories they've been saying they want.

Superman Adventures #7 (May 97, $1.75) is even priced below many other comics of today. Customers who say they want economical, good, super-hero comics should buy many multiples of the issue and distribute them in appropriate fashions (to hospitals, doctors' offices, friends' kids, etc.). That's the way they can encourage more of what they say they want.

(If stores are sold out, order and pay for reorders. The only way to send this message is financially; the only way to be sure the message gets through is via eliminating copies from warehouses.)

"All Creatures Great and Small," Part One, is written by Scott McCloud, pencilled by Rick Burchett, and inked by Terry Austin. And just because Superman is in his old costume doesn't mean the plotting is tired or the creators can't tell an inventive story packed with twists and turns. The theme of size advantage and disadvantage is examined throughout an adventure which opens with criminals once exiled to The Phantom Zone, now shrunk to action-figure size and depowered.

It isn't long before Superman, too, is two inches high and the villains have regained — But check it out. Fans who yearn for super-heroes the way they used to be (and well-written and -drawn) will be tickled by this title. A

Regco expands

Fans of Richard "Grass" Green's work in underground and mainstream humor comics over the past three decades will recognize the characters Wildman and Rubberoy, who appear on brochures from Regco Enterprises, Green's arts-supply company.

Regco offers preruled drawing papers for comic-book artists and has recently added several lines of inking tools, as well as professional mailing envelopes for comics submissions. Green recently reported that Regco has expanded and just moved into its own building.

"We want our patrons, old and new, to be aware that Regco is coming back to the fore, offering more items than ever," said Green.

The Regco brochure can be obtained by sending two first-class stamps to Regco, P.O. Box 13181, Fort Wayne, IN 46867. Distributors, retailers, and publishers can call (219) 426-0287 for bulk rates on supplies.

200 Comics: $37.50
200 Superhero comics for only $37.50. Why the odd price? POSTAGE IS INCLUDED. All comics are in Fine to Near Mint condition and range from the 70s to now. Your order will contain only superhero books with the majority being Marvels and DCS. This is a great way to spruce up those 50 cent books. At these prices we cannot guarantee any specific titles, but we will try to include the best we have available and a few "treasures" to keep you ordering more!
We accept VISA and MasterCard, checks and Money Orders. Credit Card orders sent out within 48 hours. Call Cory Glaberson at (708) 386-6550 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. CST or send order to:

HORROR FROM MA'S ATTIC!

That's right! My old friend Roger went up in his Ma's attic and found a dusty box of 50's Horror Comics! NOTE! Books with (*) before their number Show the effects of unprotected storage! Worn, tan, chipped, dusty, dirty, ETC.! Our prices reflect the wear, so do not expect NM gems. But check these prices - if you want to fill in your runs, every one of these books is complete and fairly solid. Good hunting!

THE SPIRIT — THE INNER VOICE #10 — WILL EISNER

WHEN I AWOKE, I TURNED TO THANK THE DONOR WHO SAVED MY LIFE! NOM DU CHIEN... IT WAS ANDRÉ!
YES, MAURICE, NOW WE ARE CHAINED BY BLOOD! YOU CAN NEVER ESCAPE ME NOW!
..I WENT BACK TO GERMANY WITH THE NAZIS UNTIL THE WAR'S END... THEN, I ESCAPED TO AMERICA AND DISCOVERED THAT ANDRÉ WAS HERE, TOO.. WORKING A PHONY FORTUNE-TELLING RACKET! I HAD A PLAN... I CALLED ANDRÉ.....
GO BACK FOR THE TREASURE? PAH! THEY WILL NEVER LET US OUT OF SPAIN!
I HAVE A BOAT READY.. LISTEN TO MY PLAN...
CUNNINGLY, I PLACED A FAN BEHIND A BOTTLE OF ANAESTHETIC..
JUST LIKE THE ONE I ARRANGED FOR YOU... SPIRIT!!
© 1991 WILL EISNER

The Spirit is available from good comics shops everywhere. If your comics shop doesn't carry it, send for a free 64-page catalog listing all of The Spirit comics, Will Eisner graphic novels, and tons of other items from Kitchen Sink Press, 320 Riverside Drive, Northampton, MA 01060 or by calling (800) 365-7465.

MEGA DEAL 7
50 ASSORTED STAR TREK GENE RODDENBERRY SETS

Way back in the beginning Star Trek was struggling to get onto the airwaves. T.V. Networks and stations could not understand the concept in words. Gene Roddenberry took to presenting pictures on Mini Cards to the T.V. stations in his promotional mailings and thus created a unique 19 set 504 card collectable card set. Produced from about 1973-1987 or so, each set had only one very small printing (as Magill Barrett Roddenberry) states. The pictures were taken on the set by Gene himself, showing various phases of each production, including himself, costumes, creatures (some that made it and some that did not) Each set is 16 cards long and there are 19 sets total. Order yours today as we have a very limited supply and they can never be re-made as the negatives do not exist anymore!

Retail at $9.95/set of 16

COMICS IN YOUR FUTURE

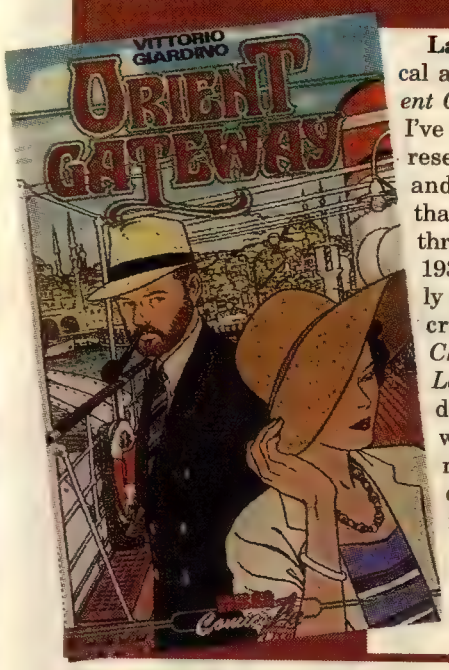
Publisher's Picks & Retailer Reviews

A number of publishers were recently asked to choose, from the material they have scheduled to ship in July, which titles they felt would be most worthy of the attention of readers and collectors. Participating retailers were then asked to predict how popular each title will be and to grade each preview from A+ to F, according to how successful they found it as a work of art or entertainment.

Orient Gateway

NBM, 64 pages, color, $12.95

NBM's Terry Nantier: "Summer 1938. Europe is teetering on the brink. Hitler builds his armies. Stalin unleashes a savage purge. In the far corners of the world, the intelligence agencies of the major powers fall into a frenzy of relentless warring. One Mr. Stern, an engineer, becomes the stake in this shadowy conflict. Chased by Stalin's spies, Stern takes refuge in Istanbul." This title by Vittorio Giardino was originally published by Catalan but has been out of print for a number of years.



Lawton: A dense tale of political and ideological intrigue, Orient Gateway is about the closest I've seen a comic book come to resembling a finely made film and one of the rare occasions that a comic book written as a thriller succeeds as such. Set in 1930s Istanbul, this historically authentic story reads like a cross between Casablanca, Charade, and Raiders of the Lost Ark, minus the athletic derring-do. Though readers with short attention spans might find its lack of physicality daunting, lovers of fine thrillers will find much to enjoy. Beautiful and stylishly detailed art, too! Grade: A.

Bennett: Orient Gateway is a wonderfully crafted thriller, drawn in a style that seems halfway between Milton Caniff and Hergé. There are the requisite plot twists and turns and exotic women and locales, but there's also a keen appreciation of the muddled moral ground the characters inhabit that raises the story above mere genre material. Grade: A.

Mateer: This is a cynical, shadowy story of spycraft and betrayal. Giardino's art, which influenced Marshall Rogers, among others, is clean and precise, with an emphasis on faces and sophisticated backgrounds. The world-weary main character navigates through dirty tricks and heartbreak and tries to keep his balance, literally and spiritually, and the reader is grateful to be along for the ride. Grade: A-.

Biggers: Orient Gateway is a well-crafted, Hitchcockian suspense-espionage tale that, at times, brings up memories of The Man Who Knew Too Much. It's very European in structure and tone. Readers with an appreciation for that more subdued approach so common in Europe will find it very rewarding; readers with more contemporary sensibilities might find the finished product a bit subdued.

Denbow: As always, Giardino's work is lovely to behold, with honest renderings of characters and settings which are beguilingly simple yet draw us deeply into his story. This is a fine, satisfying, addition to anyone's graphic library. For retailers who are interested in attracting more "civilians" into his or her store, and ultimately into reading comics, graphic novels like Orient Gateway and Giardino's recent A Jew in Communist Prague are good items to stock. While these books may not fly off the racks like the latest Superman comics, they can appeal to any reader who is even vaguely familiar with recent European history. Also, because of the concise sequencing and sparse dialogue, these books are not intimidating to non-comics readers. A.

Tykes, Alternative,

36 pages, two-color, $2.95

Jeff Mason says: "Steve Weissman's instantly recognizable art and characters have been all over the place lately — on CDs by The Presidents of the United States of America, in Tower Records' Pulse! magazine, and in his own hilarious, smartly designed, self-published comics series Yikes." Tykes is Weissman's introduction to the Yikes series, scheduled for a fall release by Alternative Press.

Bennett: Steve Weissman's cartooning has a crisp, impressionistic charm that harkens back to the rough-edged, raw-boned early years of Peanuts and is eerily evocative of the sharp meanness of everyday childhood experiences. Behind the wacky antics of Li'l Bloody and The Pullapart Boy there's a disturbing, fierce undertone that lingers long after you've finished reading Tykes. Grade: A.

Ginsberg: Another talented self-publisher whom I reviewed way back, Yikes creator Steve Weissman self-publishes no more. Now, L'il Bloody, The Pullapart Boy, Dead Boy, and the whole creepy gang appear in Tykes. Leading into a new Yikes series this fall, this two-color self-contained issue is imbued with all the twisted and painful humor of this highly original and increasingly sought-after creator.

Originally described by me as Beavis and Butt-Head on acid, this quirky gang of sharp-toothed and scarcely stitched-together characters transcends that sort of juvenile humor, though you may not want to let this young talent babysit your children. A+.

Mateer: Hmmm — how to describe this? Peanuts on acid? The unholy spawn of The Addams Family and Leave It to Beaver? Calvin and Hobbes as done by Chester Brown? Creator Steve Weissman's Yikes tells stories of grade-school kids who wouldn't be out of place in the Li'l Rascals — except that one, L'il Bloody, is a vampire, and another, Pullapart Boy, is sewn together out of spare parts, and another, Dead Boy, is, well, dead. All the mothers and teachers and other kids in the comic book find this completely normal, and none of it stops the characters from suffering all the slings and arrows of elementary-school life. It's all oddly compelling and fascinating and very surreal. Definitely not everyone's cup of tea, but give this comic book a chance and see if it doesn't grow on you. Grade: B+.

The Collected Bru-Hed

Schism

128 pages, B/W, $13.95

Schism's Mike Pascale says: "With art and story by Mike Pascale and Dave Sonnett and wrapped with front and back covers by Dean Armstrong, this collection of the Bru-Hed mini-series, the 1987 Test-Market Edition, and some never-before-seen sketches and gags features super-villains Grrim and Grritty, psychotic comic-book writers, CBG employees turned mobsters, car chases, assassinated talk-show hosts, obligatory swimsuit models, allergic nymphomaniacs, bound-and-gagged self-publishers, angry parents, militant feminists, a cuisinart killer, a beauty contest, voluminous background gags, agonizing alliteration, and a plethora of parody, pedantic puns, political incorrectness, and pulchritude."

Ginsberg: Bru-Hed may have been ahead of its time when I plugged this stuff more than a year ago. Perhaps now the market is ready for Pascale's sardonic and sarcastic humor. This reprint collection is filled with spoofs and parodies. With stories like "Beer Run" and "Spaced Invaders," there is bound to be something in here to make you laugh out loud. And what a rarity that is. Grade: B+.

Lawton: You've got to love someone who nicknames you after a candy bar — in my case, "Cadbury," and I'd really like to love his work, but Pascale says it best himself when he compares Bru-Hed to the "Kurtzman, Elder, Wolverton, and Boswell, but not as good." Well — yeah. One senses that Pascale is letting good taste rein in his wilder impulses. Though Bru-Hed seems a mouthpiece for nonconformist PC-bashing, it actually comes off as a slightly more risqué version of the worst traits of Mad. This is especially true in the four-part main storyline. What starts out as a fun poke at the excesses of Image tough guys is reduced to a typical Image punch-out featuring the same type of lame wisecracks — though I did feel oddly moved when Bru-Hed surveyed his destroyed apartment with tears in his eyes. Likewise, a run-in with a pair of radical feminists develops pretty much as it would in an issue of Cracked. Some of the one- and two-page pieces like "Proposal of Indecency," "Real Heroes," and "One Too Many," however, are quick hit-and-run bits that don't belabor the humor with tedious plot devices and are generally more successful. Grade: C+.

Mateer: "Sophomoric" is often used as an insult, but good sophomoric humor is hard to find — Milk and Cheese is the only current comic book that comes to mind (well, Hate, at first, but Peter Bagge's taken it to a higher level lately). Anyway, Pascale's Bru-Hed is a contender. As his name implies, he likes to drink beer and sit around the house watching sports, he doesn't know much about women (but what he knows, he likes), he has a bad attitude, and weird comic-book-type characters keep intruding on his determinedly slacker existence. Pascale is a fanboy — the story is peppered with Image slams and good-natured caricatures of various comics creators (including Peter David and Tony Isabella as villains) — but he can draw and he knows how to tell a story. Every time I started to lose interest, some panel or plot twist or gag kept me reading. There's a lot here, but the $14 price tag is a lot, too. Open this book at random — if you like the first five pages you see, it's probably worth it to you. Grade: B.

Mage: The Hero Defined #1

Image Comics

32 pages, color, $2.50

Image Comics' Matt Wagner says: "The discovery continues and magic abounds, as the adventures of Kevin Matchstick and his magic baseball bat return to comics. I'm thrilled to return to my roots and delve once again into a world of trolls, goblins, and wizardry. Mage has always been my dearest work, and the reunion is a sweet one, indeed. Magic, adventure, and myth collide in the triumphant return of Mage: The Hero Defined." Mage is written and drawn by Wagner and colored by Jeremy Cox.

Denbow: Now, there's some comics news guaranteed to make you salivate. I'm sure you'll agree that this is not just a comic book, but an event in and of itself. Wagner is one of the best writers in comics, and his art is both beautiful and powerful.

The return of Kevin Matchstick is not to be missed by anyone who enjoys a good comic book. It is full of explosive action and dynamic characters and tells a good, solid story.

The original Mage series was a stunning blend of rich fantasy and super-heroic elements with believable characters and realistic setting. The new series is sure to be even more thrilling and satisfying, because Wagner's talent has grown so much in the intervening years. I cannot wait for the next issues! Highest recommendation. Grade: A++.

Ginsberg: The return of Mage is noteworthy, but the news arrives with disappointingly little to review. My guess is that this will not only appeal to fans of Wagner's Grendel and Batman work, but Hellboy readers are gonna love this, too.

Mateer: Wagner created two memorable characters published by Comico in the early '80s: Grendel (who's since appeared in close to 100 comics in various titles and mini-series), and Kevin Matchstick, who appeared in the 15-issue Mage limited series. That original story was a revelation: multi-textured, confident, entertaining storytelling, which combined various aspects of heroic mythology, magic, and the hero's quest for self-discovery with standard comic-book idioms and plots.

Ever since, "When's Mage II coming out?" has been a standard joke. (On the Internet, it's part of the FAQ in the comics newsgroups.) Now it's here. This being an Image comic book now, the preview only has two pages of art, so I can't tell you much about it — but trust me on this one. It'll be good. Grade: A.

Lawton: As usual for Image, there isn't much provided to review, so I will say only that, as writer, Wagner gets points for having his characters sing a song by The Jam and, as artist, he gets points for depicting the human characters as human and not as some super-heroic version of the Michelin Man. Grade: C.

Biggers: For Mage fans, it's going to be well worth the wait.

This grand fantasy adventure is on a par with the best Vertigo series, and readers have been eager to see where the story goes ever since Wagner wrapped up the first Mage saga, oh, so long ago. My only worry is that readers new to Mage (and that's probably 60% to 75% of today's readership) aren't going to know about it at all and will be a tough sell for this new series.

I hope I'm wrong. Mage deserves to be one of the hottest comics of the summer. Grade: A.

Retailers' grade: A-

As you can see, our name has changed but our reputation remains the same. Order with confidence, knowing you'll receive the most correctly graded books in the mail order comics genre. This latest ad contains over 160 new books, some very scarce 1950's Atlas and D.C. Dark Age Comics and a new Marvel Comics Collection with extraordinary copies. All books are strictly and correctly graded. Asterisk (*) indicates white pages. Please include $5 (orders $50-$150); $6 (orders $151-$300); and $7 (orders $301-$600); $9 (orders $601-up) for shipping and insurance. Full refund on all books returned within 10 days in same condition. U.S. postal M.O.'s shipped same day received. Phone reserves held for 7 days. NEVER ASSUME A BOOK HAS BEEN SOLD!.

Transmetropolitan #1

DC Comics
32 pages, color, $2.50

DC's Scott Nybakken says: "In Helix's newest ongoing series, gonzo journalism lives in the 21st century. Cult author Spider Jerusalem has lived a survivalist existence in the mountains for five years. Now he returns to The City — a chaotic near-future melting pot of cultures, subcultures, life forms, and technologies — because it's the only place where he can write."

Under a cover by Geof Darrow is a story by Warren Ellis and art by Darick Robertson and Jerome K. Moore.

Bennett: Ellis doesn't fall into the obvious trap of painting the future in strict utopian or dystopian terms; he understands that, like today, it's going to be big, loud, complicated, and utterly unpredictable. Which is what makes Transmetropolitan the disquieting, fun-filled romp that it is. It's a magnificently realized vision (household appliances on drugs) that conveys the undiscovered country in all its dread, delicious possibilities. Grade: A.

Ginsberg: Robertson's edgy, intricate art creates the atmosphere in this no-holds-barred story of a wreck of a writer who is having a hard time fulfilling a five-year-old contract for two new books. When his impatient editor calls, the camo-garbed, mountain-dwelling recluse is dragged back to civilization, putting an end to "five years of shooting at fans and neighbors, eating what I kill, and bombing the unwary." Helix is another DC imprint that hasn't done diddly for us, but this contemporary tale just may be the title to appeal to a large audience. Grade: B+.

Mateer: Here's a high-concept series: A gonzo journalist of the future, a Hunter S. Thompson type, has to come down from his mountain hideaway and enter the big city to earn money as a writer again. DC's even using the words "fear and loathing" in the ad copy (although after that sticky mess with Jonah Hex and the Winter brothers, you'd think it'd tread more carefully in parodying real-life celebrities). At any rate, if you're an Ellis fan, you should enjoy this. He's good at characters with nasty attitudes and cynical dispositions, and artist Robertson helps him make the city into a dyspeptic dystopia. Grade: B+.

Lawton: The lead character of this comic book is apparently some kind of a 21st century Hunter S. Thompson. Unfortunately, I don't care for Thompson and I get more than enough of a comics-style version of him in Doonesbury. Furthermore, I'm getting pretty tired of comics set in futuristic urban landscapes of miniature electronics, corporate advertising, technobabble, and punk attitude. I get more than enough of that in real life. Sure, Transmetropolitan is great, if you've never seen Blade Runner or if you haven't cracked open any other comic book since the advent of cyberspace. If you have, then you've already seen better.

Biggers: Transmetropolitan is an unusual comic book — almost overloaded with concepts. The Alan Moore-ish lead character, Spider Jerusalem, isn't a particularly likable fellow, which may be a problem for some readers. (One problem for me was the character's incessant chain-smoking — but that's a personal bias creeping in, I suspect.) But I'm not sure that Ellis wants us to like this character, actually. The first issue introduces us to Jerusalem's world, laying the groundwork for the storyline. It's interesting to see Ellis' take on the changing role of print in the not-so-distant future, along with his visions of future technology. And Robertson's artwork is radically different from the style we've seen on his superhero work; he's reinvented his visual approach for this series, with generally impressive results. Grade: B+.

Denbow: I have anticipated the release Transmetropolitan. As Spider Jerusalem travels to his former editor's office, Ellis defines Spider's rough character as Robertson's sharply detailed art illustrates the futuristic landscape. This is not a pretty, comfortable world, and unkempt Spider is in sharp contrast to his high-tech surroundings, even as he seems to fit in with the grungy inhabitants. It could well be the best Helix title yet. Those who have read Ellis' work before know how capable he is of delivering a cool story, and Robertson's art is as full of rich detail as Geof Darrow's. Recommended. Grade: A.

Retailers' grade: B+

Other Recommendations:

Ginsberg: Another early plug of mine, and a guy who started out in mini-comics format, similar to Steve Weissman, is Peter Sickman-Garner and his Hey, Mister comic book. With a new full-sized #1 issue, he is truly deserving of another boost, since this may be his best material yet. Young Tim and Mister lead bleak, pathetic lives of despair and hopelessness. I love it! This stuff is hilarious and riddled with the sort of angst that just makes me guffaw. Taking on both Billy Joel and the pretentious Sting — in "Night of the Living Sting Fans" — is almost too much to bear. You must go to your retailer and demand your copy of Hey, Mister #1 or write Sickman-Garner c/o Insomnia Comics, P.O. Box 4085, Fayetteville, AR 72702.

Usagi Yojimbo Color Special (Dark Horse): Usagi Yojimbo, lifesaver, rescues a toddler from being trampled under the hooves of an oncoming horse. Holding the arrow-pierced dying horseman in his arms, Usagi is entrusted with a green ceramic persimmon — plain enough, but apparently worth a life. Usagi is then pursued by a band of rogues with a mission to kill the samurai rabbit before he uncovers the secret of the green persimmon. The poetic work of Stan Sakai continues to enthrall, deceiving in its simplicity, yet obviously imbued with the integrity of the creator. Any Usagi story is worth your time, and this one is no exception. A.

Robert W. Getz (for Claude's Comics): One of my early attempts to create my own comic book was The Adventures of Cat-Man. Loosely based on, ahem, another character who was popular at the time, Cat-Man was a stick figure with cat ears, whiskers, and a cape, and his adventures filled reams of the vertically glued tablet paper my father brought home from the office. Those days come flooding back whenever I read Jay Stephens' The Land of Nod. Although I'd been attracted by the All-red-like pop sense of his Atomic City Tales, as a story, it seemed to wander and, soon, so did I. The Land of Nod is also a postmodern take on super-heroics, but in the shape of a goofy, giddy kid's cartoon, albeit a really hip one. Stylistically suggestive of a jam session between Matt Groening and Doug Allen, Nod is populated with zombie grunge bands, giant robots, and flying babies. The latest installment (first of three parts) continues the adventures of 8-year-old Melanie McCay, aka Jetcat, as she faces the collective malevolence of the Jetcat Haters' Club. But can she slip away from her birthday party? Although the Jetcat/Cat-Man crossover may never happen, I think they would have understood each other perfectly.

Denbow: Dark Horse's Sin City: Sex and Violence: Imagine you are driving hurriedly through a dark, rainy night, preoccupied and anxious. Out of the blue, as you slide around a bend in the road, you see a woman sprawled across the cold, wet pavement. Of course, you skid to a stop to make sure she's OK. As you approach, you see she is voluptuous and are drawn to how vulnerable she appears to be. What do you do? Do you continue the encounter? (Remember, in Sin City, anything goes, and there are no holds barred.)

That's the set-up for Frank Miller's latest Sin City title, Sex and Violence, and the dilemma that the protagonist of the first story must resolve. Miller has become a true master of telling sharp, intelligent short stories that employ marvelous twists of fate. And, man, can he create provocative stories! As Harlan Ellison does in his prose short stories, Miller has a damn fine talent for giving all the necessary characterization, background, and detail in just a few short strokes of the pen to draw the reader in. This is no exception. Highly recommended, not only for readers in search of a good comic book, but also those writers and artists looking for examples of what constitutes a good short graphic story. A+.

Bennett: And might I also suggest The Rite from Knight Press? David Hartman's anything-goes mix of oozing horror, slam-bang action, and wonky humor has appealing characters, some strong cartooning, and a wild rhythm all its own. The Rite, whose face is held on by butterfly tabs, is equally adept at battling monsters and helping hurt puppies. Hartman is someone to watch for in the future. The Rite is a comic book to get now.

Wolff & Byrd, Counselors of the Macabre — By Batton Lash

UH-OH... THEY FOUND US!
MAN, ON OCCASION, HAS HAD BRUSHES WITH THE SUPERNATURAL AND SOMETIMES DRASTIC MEASURES HAVE BEEN TAKEN TO DEAL WITH THAT WHICH MAN DOES NOT UNDERSTAND. THAT IS WHY MEMBERS OF THE SUPERNATURAL ARE WELL ADVISED TO RETAIN THE PROPER LEGAL COUNSEL.
AND LOOK HOW MANY THERE ARE!
DID YOU HEAR THAT, MR. LEACH?
THEY LEARNED YOU GREW UP IN THIS HOUSE -- WE CAN'T STAY HERE -- ER, MR. LEACH? COULD YOU PLEASE COME DOWN FROM THERE?
OH--OF COURSE, MS. WOLFE--I WAS JUST LURKING
I KNEW MY SECRET WOULD GET OUT SOMEDAY-- BUT I NEVER DREAMT I'D BE HUNTED LIKE THIS! CHOKE
I UNDERSTAND YOU'RE A PRIVATE PERSON, MR. LEACH-- BUT YOU ALSO HAPPEN TO BE A MODERN-DAY VAMPIRE...

BID ITEMS!

We are accepting bids on the following strictly graded comics until June 5. These are original owner comics which have not seen daylight for over 30 years. Most have great page quality. Bid what you like, by mail or by phone, until May 31. From June 1 through June 5, only phone bids will be accepted, and all bids must top the current high bid by at least 5%. We reserve the right to reject any bids. Books which do not receive an acceptable bid will be advertised for direct sale in a future CBG. We will also be listing over 2500 other comics from this same collection in the coming weeks.

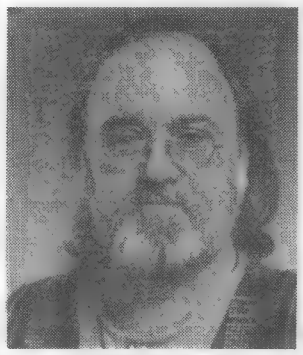
COMIC BOOK PRICES - SILVER AGE TO PRESENT

Trade barriers?

Recently, one of the comic-book newsgroups heated up when one fan expressed his aggravation with trade paperbacks that include material that was not part of the original comic book. This led to a lengthy discussion of the inherent nature of trade paperbacks as reprints — after all, that's what they're supposed to be, right?



Cliff Biggers

"It's possible that, in the near future we'll see fans looking for collectible editions of hard-to-find trade paperbacks."

As the discussion progressed, it became clear that, to most collectors, a trade paperback is an inherently "uncollectible" item. The comic books that are featured in the trade paperback become desirable and increase in value, but the trade paperback itself is just an inexpensive way of accumulating all the issues of a given storyline in a convenient package.

But when a publisher puts new material in a trade paperback — whether it's the new art pages added in each trade paperback edition of Sin City, or new story pages as were added in Sandman: The Wake (which were also made available in an issue of The Dreaming for fans who wanted the pages and didn't mind having them "out of order"), or an entire new story, as Bob Burden is adding in his first Flaming Carrot trade paperback — it seems to upset the status quo. Suddenly, fans have to think of the trade paperback as an inherently collectible item, and that's not something that the marketplace seems ready to do — yet.

The trade paperback is having an effect on comic-book sales, like it or not — but, oddly enough, it's not necessarily collectible sales that are being affected. In some cases, such as Cerebus and, to a lesser degree, Sin City, the knowledge that the stories will be available in trade paperback relatively soon seems to have a "flattening" effect on individual issue sales. Some retailers complained that the knowledge that a Justice League: A Midsummer's Nightmare trade paperback was in the works hurt their sales on the third issue of that series, which shipped after the news of the trade paperback was widespread.

In these cases, the trade paperback may have reduced sales of the original issues. But it doesn't happen all the time.

Are there two different sorts of comic books? Are there comic books — like the new JLA series — that appeal to collectors are not affected at all by the availability of trade-paperback reprints? Are there other comic books that are "readers' titles" rather than "collectors' titles"? Are these comic books affected by trade-paperback sales because the larger part of their audience is buying them to read the story, not to invest in a comic-book collectible?

It's very possible that — once you get away from the traditional super-hero series that has been the focus of most collectors for decades — the trade paperback is actually the preferred form of fiction. In the science-fiction and mystery fields, the paperback was, for decades, a "reading copy" only. Except for those few books with covers by Frank Frazetta, the paperback was viewed by many as a substitute for the desirable hardcover edition. While hardcover editions increased in value, the paperbacks often decreased to used-book prices after the initial market was saturated. It took a long time for collectors to embrace the paperback as a collectible in its own right.

Maybe we're coming to a time when the comic-book-related trade paperback will "come into its own," as well.

We're already seeing an increase in demand for out-of-print comics-related hardcovers, such as the early Sandman hardcovers from DC or some of the out-of-print hardcover editions produced by Graphitti in the 1980s. It's possible that, in the near future, we'll see fans looking for collectible editions of hard-to-find trade paperbacks like the early Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles phonebook editions or the first printings of the Sin City trade paperback. (Did you notice that Frank Miller changed the cover art on later printings?)

But what happens if the interest in trade paperbacks results in a decline in comic-book sales, as has been the case for some titles recently? Can creators adjust to a shifting paradigm that has readers passing up the original comic-book printings in lieu of the trade-paperback editions? Can they afford to?

Miller and Dark Horse are experimenting later this summer with something new: an original Sin City book that bypasses the comic-book format to go staight to book form.

Will this become a preferred format among creators who want to tell longer stories?

Will collectors accept this true "graphic novel" format as collectible?

It's too early to say right now, but it appears that a lot of people are going to have to change their way of thinking before these collected editions are going to find the sort of collectible success that comics have achieved.

On Top Of The Trends

OUR INDEPENDENTS PRICE LISTING N-S FOLLOWS IN THIS SECTION.

Marketplace Minutes

The "Bad Girl" cool-down continues, with retailers reporting decreased demand for once-hot issues of Lady Death, Shi, Witchblade, Vampirella, and other once-hot comics. The rapid price increases for most of these titles have leveled off, and some comic books are even seeing modest price decreases. Even those titles that haven't changed in price are seeing a much smaller demand; fans simply aren't looking for them the way they did just a few months ago.

The success story of the month has to be JLA. Even though DC got a trade-paperback compilation of the first four issues into comics shops ASAP, readers are still clamoring for those early issues. It appears that JLA # 2 and #3 are particularly hard to find, with many retailers pricing them as high as — or more than — the price of the first issue.

Some independents are showing strong price increases, with early issues of popular titles like Scud, Strangers in Paradise, Bone, and Poison Elves showing steady price escalation as demand continues to rise. Each of these are comic books that graduated from small-print-run, cult-favorite status to major indy success.

The demand for variant covers is definitely cooling; fans are realizing that these covers simply aren't worth the extra money in most cases. The interest in "nude" cover and "adult" cover versions has almost disappeared; obviously, collectors have decided that these covers aren't worth two to three times the cost of the regular editions of the comics.

Prices on recent Star Wars comic books have remained relatively stable, but retailers are reporting strong increases in demand — and in price — for the Marvel Star Wars comic books, particularly the later issues (which had a relatively small print run). Some retailers have expressed surprise that the Star Wars fever hasn't infected the back-issue comic-book market. Others say that the phenomenal short-term increase in price for Star Wars: Dark Empire indicates that Star Wars fever hit those titles before it spread to the mainstream market, so it would be unreasonable to expect further price increases.

The Winners of last month's contest:

Hurry, the deadline is Monday, June 16, 1997. Winners will be announced in the next CBG Price Guide Supplement, which will be in CBG #1233.

PRICE GUIDE

COMIC BOOK PRICES - SILVER AGE TO PRESENT

Independents N-S

The prices given here are for near-mint comics. This is the most acceptable and general condition a collector desires for newer comics. A near-mint copy is almost perfect — with almost no signs of wear or aging. There might be one or two tiny defects discernable only on close examination (for example, an extremely slight flaking on the spine).

The condition of comics is a vital factor in determining comics values. The primary conditions used in grading are "poor" (undesirable in most collections), "fair," "good," "fine," and "mint." Other grades, including the "near-mint" we use, are steps between these. A "fair" issue would be worth about 20% of our price. A "fine" issue would be worth about 60% of our price. And a "mint" copy would be worth 120% of our price.

Note: Changes that occurred between our last CBG Price Guide and this one are indicated by a + or - sign. Prices that went up from our last issue have the + sign by the title. Prices that went down from our last issue have the - sign by the title.

Why are there shaded areas in the price guide?

We shade certain titles to call attention to price changes, character appearances, and other interesting facts, with many of these trivia tidbits indicated by the heading Didja know?

For example, unlike most other Valiant titles, several issues of Ninjak have been increasing in value. And didja know that Colin King, the original Ninjak, made an appearance in Ninjak (Vol. 2) #4?

What would you like to see in the price guide? Send your comments and questions on this section to Brent Frankenhoff, CBG Price Guide, 700 East State St., Iola, WI 54990.

Star Wars: X-Wing Rogue Squadron #17 © 1997 Lucasfilm Ltd. and Dark Horse Comics, Inc.

Didja know?

Although it would appear that the two issues of Star Wars: X-Wing Rogue Squadron are the final issue of one mini-series and the first issue of another, respectively, they are really two consecutive issues according to their indicias.

SUPER TRADERS

Super Trader ads are available for $108.00 each. Super Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 5" x 5" size. Super Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Super Trader ads.

SUPER TRADERS

Super Trader ads are available for $108.00 each. Super Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 5" x 5" size. Super Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Super Trader ads.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

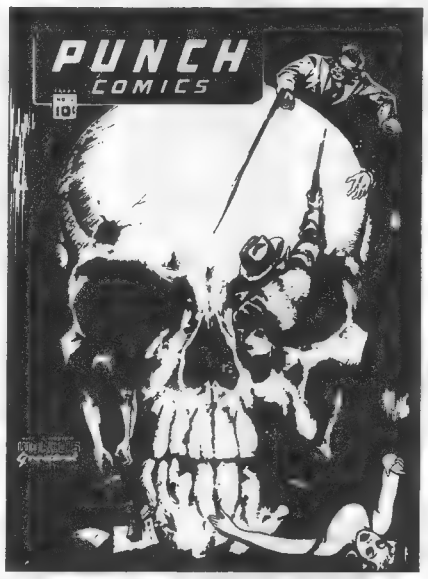
OVER 1 MILLION CARNAL COMICS IN PRINT!

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

Classic Golden Age Limited Edition Prints

Continuing in our series of limited edition prints featuring classic Golden Age covers, The Comic Archives is proud to offer Catman Comics #28 and Punch Comics #12! Each image has been produced on 12" x 18" 100 pound Warren Lustro® archival cover stock. Prints are individually hand numbered, then UV coated providing a deep, glossy finish. Press runs are extremely limited!



Punch Comics #12. January 1945

These classic Golden Age covers have been recreated from the originals using the most sophisticated digital computer technology available. Careful attention to every detail has created the most dynamic and vibrant images possible from one of the greatest nostalgic eras in comic history. Editions are limited to only 100. Our last print, Phantom Lady #17, was a complete sell out! Order now because once they're gone... they're gone!

Maggie Thompson, Editor Comics Buyer's Guide
"These are gaudily typical of the genre and are ideal as gifts if you can bear to part with them once you see them. Press runs are limited to only 100, and the price is only $14.95, Geez! How can you pass these up?"

BARGAIN HUNTER'S BONANZA!
Amazing deals in our free monthly auction catalog which features: single comics, groupings, wholesale lots, etc. All are awarded to the highest bidder (many items go for as low as 10% of book value.), we grade very conservatively. Catalog includes all areas of collectibles i.e. sportscards, autographs, stamps, coins, comic books. Our return rate is less than 5 lots per 15,000.

The advertisers' index is provided as a reader service. Occasional last minute changes may result in ads appearing on pages other than those listed here. The publisher assumes no liability for omissions or errors.

GENERAL INFORMATION

A. PAYMENT: Ads must be accompanied by payment. You may pay with a check, money order, or credit card.

B. CREDIT CARDS: We will accept the following credit cards: VISA, MasterCard, American Express, Discover.

C. DEADLINE: For all advertising is 4:00 p.m. each Tuesday, unless otherwise stated on deadline card.

D. TERMS: Cash with copy only. All advertisers must provide information for the confidential use of the publisher should questions arise.

E. CONTRACT RATES are available for 6, 13, 26, or 52 consecutive issues. Contract rates apply to fulfillment of contract items. Cancellation of a contract by the advertiser allows the publisher to reinvoice covered ads at the earned rate. This rate card is a part of the advertising contract.

F. MINORS are required to furnish a statement of responsibility from their parent or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.

G. ERRORS: Typewritten copy is recommended. The publisher is not responsible for errors resulting from long-hand or illegible copy, or changes submitted by telephone. The publisher's liability for any error shall not exceed the cost of the space occupied by that error.

H. LAYOUT and design services are provided by Krause Publications for advertisers who do not submit camera-ready copy. Due to the creative and subjective nature of these services, credit will not be allowed for conceptual variations.

I. GRADING: Items offered in any ad must be properly described as to condition, conforming to the standards set forth in Comics Buyer's Guide Price Guide. Advertisers may also exercise the option of grading offerings by applying a unique personal system, providing the standards applied are detailed in the ad to avoid confusion.

J. RETURN PRIVILEGE: Except as otherwise specified in any ad, an advertiser must accept the return of any merchandise postmarked within ten working days of its receipt by a customer.

K. P.O. BOX ADS are allowed, but the permanent home address, phone number and place of business of the advertiser must be filed with the publisher before advertisements may be printed.

L. SPECIAL PAGE POSITIONS are available at a premium, inquire for details.

M. ADVERTISING AGENCIES: There are no agency discounts.

N. CAMERA READY display ads qualify for a 15% discount. Copy must be ready for camera without additional paste-up or film work required. No charge for reproductions, enlargements or mail response key change. Classified Display, Comics Trader, Collector's Showcase and classified word ads do not qualify for the camera ready discount.

O. SPACE RESERVATIONS available for camera ready ads only. Must be made prior to ad deadline. Reserved space must be paid for even if ad does not arrive on time.

P. PRE-PRINTED INSERTS are available in Comics Buyer's Guide. Inquire for additional information and technical specifications.

Q. CIRCULATION is throughout the United States and Canada by subscription and single copy sales by agents in shops and other outlets.

R. PROOF OF PUBLICATION: Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed to those advertisers requesting this service. We regret we cannot provide this service to classified advertisers.

S. NOTE: All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions of the current rate card. Krause Publications, Inc. reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in its discretion it sees fit, for any reason, whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as acceptance of all rates and conditions in effect at the time the advertising is submitted. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions which conflict with its policies. Advertisers and advertising agencies assume liability for all content (including text representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assumes responsibility of any claims arising therefrom made against the publisher. It is the advertiser's or agency's responsibility to obtain appropriate releases on any item or individual pictured in their advertising. All agreements are subject to strikes, accidents, acts of God, or other contingencies beyond the publisher's control. UNIT ADVERTISING:

A. COLLECTORS SHOWCASE

Collectors Showcase Units are 3-1/4" wide x 1-5/8" high and can be bought in multiples. All typesetting is done by Krause Publications and is included in the price.

Cost per ad per issue: ads must run consecutively to earn contract discounts

1 Issue	6 Issues	13 Issues	26 Issues	52 Issues
$29.00	$28.00	$27.00	$26.00	$24.00

B. COMICS TRADER ADS

"No-frills" advertising with a price to match. Design your own ad - just type your ad clearly on an 8-1/2"w x 8-1/2"h sheet of paper. We will reduce your Trader ad to fit a 1/9 page space (3-1/4"w x 3-1/4"h). Super Traders should be typed on an 8-1/2"w x 8-1/2"h sheet of paper which will be reduced to fit a 5" x 5" space.

Regular Trader

(Cost per ad per issue: ads must run consecutively to earn contract discounts. Limit 6 Trader spaces per page per advertiser.)

C. RETAILER DIRECTORY ..... $3.50 per issue

Leads fans to your cash register! List your store name, address, phone number and 15 words of description. Sold in 26 and 52 week increments. It's targeted more to the comics buff than the yellow pages - and it's more cost effective. If you sell COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE in your store, we will publish your listing in bold face type at no extra charge.

ADVERTISING REQUIREMENTS

A completed reference form must be in our confidential files before any buy, sell or trade ad can be placed. See below. Minors are required to furnish a statement of responsibility from their parents or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.
Payment must accompany an advertisement and must be in the form of a personal check drawn on U.S., Canadian or Mexican bank; money orders; international money orders; cashier's checks; or with your VISA, MasterCard, American Express or Discover credit card. Send your credit card number, expiration date, and the name on the card, along with permission to charge the card for your ad, with your advertising copy.

Miscellany....

☞ Bill Mumy, long-time TV actor (Babylon 5, Lost in Space), series co-creator (Space Cases), and — most relevant to this moment — recording artist (as one half of Barnes and Barnes, the artists of "Fish-heads" fame), has a new solo album out. Entitled Dying to Be Heard, it has an assortment of nifty tunes written in Bill's appropriately "spacey" style.

Standouts, in my opinion, are "My Sweet Saleena" and, most memorably, "The Ballad of William Robinson." (My name is William Robinson. I'm 42 years old. I've seen the hot side of the sun. I've seen blue icy cold. I've shot the one-eyed giant down with laser in my hand But I'll never see my home again or walk on Earth's green land.) Basically, "William Robinson" is a filk song, and I fully expect to see it showing up during filk sessions at various science-fiction conventions.

Moreover, there are some nifty photos in it, the best one being a shot directly under the CD itself that B5 fans will just love.

Although distribution at your local stores is forthcoming, you can order a copy now through the label, Infinite Visions, at (800) 755-8735.

By the way, Dying to Be Heard is not to be confused with another CD, Dying to Be Herd — recordings of people screaming while being trampled underfoot by stampedes of assorted jungle beasts — available through Rhino Records.

(Bill's gonna love that.)

☞ Although the mercurial nature of Marvel Comics' current ownership allows that matters might well have changed yet again before this sees print, as of this writing it seems as if Ron Perelman's latest gambit — namely to have Toy Biz buy Marvel — is doomed to failure. I think that's a shame.

Why? Because, once upon a time, Marvel was about publishing comics, and licensing was a fairly minor ancillary sideline. But if Toy Biz, maker of Marvel toys, had taken over Marvel, then it would have finally been official: The tail would have been wagging the dog.

By the way, I also think it's appropriate that all the major players in the imbroglio have names that are easily translatable into comic-book costumed identity names. You know:

"They think they have defeated Ron Perelman. But now let the world tremble at the wrath of: Man-Pearl!"

"Little do the bondholders know that Carl Icahn, champion of business, is actually Icon, champion of justice!" (Which will come as news to Milestone.)

"Hah! I, Joe Calamari, am heading up the transition team! Look out, world, here comes: The Squid!"

☞ I watched the Rugrats Mother's Day Special twice, which is kind of inevitable considering it's Ariel's favorite series and it was the first new one in ages. The middle dragged just a bit, but I got completely choked up both times at the end. You will not come away from it dry-eyed. I think it should win a Peabody Award.

☞ It's trailer season, and the two major comic-book-related entries could not be more different.

While the Batman & Robin trailer makes me wince at the clunky costumes and dialogue, the Men in Black trailer absolutely kicks butt.

Tommy Lee Jones and Will Smith look as though they're having a ball, the visuals are sharp, the dialogue snaps, and Jones' ultra-deadpan versus Smith's street-smart persona set off sparks in just the two minutes that I saw. As they face off against some unseen foe while brandishing massive weaponry, Smith asks in relation to their hardware, "Any clue how to work this?" To which Jones responds in a dazzling combination of ignorance and self-confidence, "No idea at all."

The frustrating thing is, most audiences don't know — and probably won't know — that MiB is derived from a comic book. Unless, of course, it bombs. Then people will be sure to say, "Well, what did you expect? It's a comic book."

☞ I'm sure that there are some folks out there who would say, "Peter David is the last person we'd want to interview." But one fanzine took that literally: Centaurian Sentinel, a Babylon 5 fanzine, had a big cover feature that was an interview with me. And the editors announced in that selfsame issue that it was their last one. Which made me officially the last person they'd interview.

☞ You know, you've got the cast of Seinfeld now earning $600,000 per episode. Why?

Because the networks earn billions off the show, and the cast felt that they were worth far more than the mere $100,000 per episode they were being offered before. They said they felt that they should be sharing in the wealth generated by the show's success.

In the meantime, networks are wringing their hands over the fact that their viewership is eroding. They keep coming up with gimmicks to get people to watch, including crossovers and 3-D stunts (the TV equivalent of fancy covers).

In the meantime, they've lost sight of the answer to one simple question: Who made Seinfeld a hit?

The cast? Creator Larry David (no relation, darn it)? The writers? No. No, they made a quality show. But there's tons of quality shows that aren't hits. The TV landscape is littered with them.

Who made it a hit? I did. And you. And you. And you over there, and, yes, you, too. You watch it. You watch it when it's good. You watch it when it's bad. You tune it in and enable NBC to charge tons of money to advertisers and even more for syndicated rights.

The viewers make hits. The viewers make and break shows. It is the viewers, and the viewers alone, who are responsible for a show taking off or sinking like a stone. Critics don't do it — otherwise EZ Streets or Murder One would have been smash hits. Writers, creators, actors don't do it. You do.

You and me.

And, my friends — we're being ripped off.

Here's NBC making all this money off Seinfeld. Here are the creators and cast making money.

And how much money are we making off Seinfeld?

Bupkus. Zero. Goose-egg, ladies and gentlemen.

This is not right. This is not fair.

Where's our share? Where's our cut? Jerry's making a million per, plus his cut of the series.

The rest of the cast is making more than half a million. They were ready to walk off the show if they didn't get what they wanted, just like the cast of Friends was ready to do last year, before they were given $100,000 an episode and new contracts guaranteeing them the right to make a series of really bad movies.

In the meantime, there are people in this country who are trying to find two nickels to rub together and eyeing, with a mixture of hunger and dread, that last can of Alpo by the kitchen cabinet.

There's an obvious answer here, one that I think will satisfy everyone concerned.

I want to be paid for watching Seinfeld.

And you do, too. And you over there. And you, too, over in the corner. (But not you over near the water cooler, because you're funny-looking.)

Think about it. We're all being ripped off. We are the hit makers, but we receive no compensation, no share, no recognition of the efforts we go to. We're just expected either to do it for nothing or, worse, to pay for cable. We have to pay good money to participate in a viewing experience where everyone is making money except us?

What makes the cast, the writers, the network better than us? And the sponsors are feeding off us, lining their pockets at our expense — paying the network for the privilege of advertising, making money from us.

And what do we get? Cable bills. Charge bills. Debt. Stuff we don't really want or need.

It's time to put an end to it. Time to let the truly deserving get their fair share.

I intend to boycott both Seinfeld and Friends until such time as NBC pays me to watch them. I'm not even looking for a hundred grand. Ten bucks would do.

"Must See TV?" I don't think so. From now on, it's "Must $ee TV," babe. You're on notice, NBC. Ten bucks a week, cash, check, or money order. And I encourage everyone out there to join me.

Ten bucks, NBC. Unlike the cast of Seinfeld, which tried for a million but settled for a little more than half that, this offer is non-negotiable.

I'm not bluffing, NBC. And I suspect that, as word of this new campaign gets out, other people won't be bluffing, either. If the cast of Seinfeld could be ripped off at $100,000, we can be respected for $10.

The clock's ticking. Decide quickly. Because my cable bill is due.

Peter David, writer of stuff, can be written to at To Be Continued Inc., P.O. Box 239, Bayport, NY 11705. NBC can, likewise, send cash, check, or money order there.

Still More Mass o' Media

★ Top Cow Productions just announced that it's entered into a deal with Oliver Stone's Illusion Entertainment to produce Witchblade: The Series, based on Top Cow's hit comic book. Before you get all squirmy, yes, it's that Oliver Stone. How'd he get involved? Top Cow's David Wohl said that, somehow, Stone got a copy of Witchblade #6, where the main character's sister, Julie Pezzini, says she's been "Meeting up with Oliver Stone" among other things. Word is that Stone was flattered to be mentioned in the issue and was intrigued with the story. He quickly ordered copies for his entire staff, and voilà! A little over a year later, there's a series in the works.

Top Cow and Illusion are seeking a distributor for television's syndication market, and casting is set to begin soon. The series is set for a Fall 1998 debut.

★ Life imitating art imitating life and so on. According to The Hollywood Reporter, in mid-July MTV will introduce a computer-animated cyberhost-veejay named Cindy. This follows a computer-generated pop star that has crowds going wild in Japan, which, itself, follows Sharon Apple, the computer-generated pop star that plays a major role in Shoji Kawamori's Macross Plus.
